Nanny Admits Lang Got Her a Free Ride

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Scottish nanny of Transport Minister Otto Lang's family was listed as a passenger on a free government flight to Britain tonight, a spokesman for the Canadian Forces Base in Trenton, Ont., said today.

And a published report today quoted the nanny, Elizabeth MacGillivray, as saying she was leaving Ottawa's Uplands Airport tonight on a defence department aircraft. She was also quoted as saying she was flown to Ottawa a year ago under the same arrangement.

However, a spokesman for Lang said today that the minister asked about the arrangement and was told Miss MacGillivray was not eligible for the free ride.

She now will be returning home by a commercial flight, the spokesman said. The national defence department had said she was not qualified to ride free on one of its planes, he added.

Lang's spokesman was unable to confirm if Miss MacGillivray had arrived in Canada on a government flight.

He said her replacement will be flying on a commercial flight from Britain, although he was unsure if space had been requested earlier for her on a government plane.

The report in the Toronto Sun said the replacement nanny is scheduled to fly to Ottawa on a government plane in a few days.

Miss MacGillivray, 21, said she is returning to her home in Morayshire, Scotland, after caring for the seven Lang children.

Lang has come under fire from opposition MPs in the House in recent days because of what they term his extravagant air travel expenses chalked up on transport department aircraft.

Jack Horner, Progressive Conservative transport critic, says Prime Minister Trudeau should remove Lang from the cabinet because the minister is using his position of public trust to better himself privately.

AECL Unworried By $20M Fee

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. was aware that it would be liable for a $20 million, unaccountable commission fee if a CANDU reactor was sold to South Korea, AECL's president said Wednesday.

John Foster said AECL's board of directors, and the then minister of energy, mines and resources were told in January, 1975, that the fee would be paid to a foreign agent.

At that time, neither the AECL board nor the federal government expressed any concern about the terms of the contract with a subsidiary of United Development Inc. of Tel Aviv, or the size of the commission, Foster added in an interview following an appearance before the Commons resources committee.

It wasn't until the first bill for $17.5 million arrived on the AECL president's desk in early 1976 that the federal nuclear agency had some second thoughts. These second thoughts subsequently resulted in a renegotiation of the agent's contract so that the fee would be lower initially and so that at least part of the fee would have to be backed up by an accounting from the agent, Foster indicated.

Yet even the renegotiated contract with the South Korean agent that called for a detailed accounting of part of the fee paid by AECL to the agent — where no such accounting was required in the original December, 1974 contract, and that will still cost AECL more than $20 million was not acceptable to the auditor-general.

Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. also paid $2.4 million into a Lichenstein bank account as its share of fees to foreign agents on sale of a nuclear reactor to Argentina.

Energy Minister Gillespie said the money was put into an account held by Intercontinental General Trading Establishment.

But the minister said he still could not say whether this was the agent involved in the Argentinian sale.

"All we know is that that's the payee," the minister said.

An Italian partner on the deal, Italimpianti, made the commercial arrangements for the sale and then billed AECL for its share of $2.4 million.

The minister said his staff have been trying to trace the payments but say the trail at the moment stops in a Schaan, Lichenstein, bank. They weren't sure it could be traced beyond that.

The auditor-general's report specifically questioned the $8.1 million in "expenses" listed by the agent as part of its $15.4 million bill submitted to AECL on April 7, 1976; it concluded that was inadequate documentation of the "expenses" claimed and paid for.

Foster told the Commons committee that when he had received the first bill in early 1976, for $17.5 million, he had become concerned about both its size and the fact that it didn't involve any accountability.

The matter was raised with the AECL board and the new AECL chairman, Ross Campbell, and subsequently re-

Caron Quits Commission

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today that H. Marcel Caron of Montreal has resigned from the newly-named royal commission into government financial supervision.

The prime minister in the Commons had been praising Mr. Caron "for his high integrity" when he stopped and said he had just been handed a letter saying the Montreal accountant is no longer willing to continue as a member of the four-member commission.

Robert Andras, treasury board president, said earlier this week he was making an investigation following criticism of the Caron appointment.

Andras said in the Commons Wednesday he only became aware late Tuesday that one of the commissioners, H. Marcel Caron, was a director of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., (AECL) a Crown corporation which came under fire from the auditor-general.

The minister said it was "a goof" that he did not know the contents of a biography he distributed to reporters on the background of commissioners Monday.

Meanwhile, it was learned here that the cabinet had little to do with either establishment or staffing of the royal commission. High-level sources say the commission and those appointed to it were the brainchild of senior public servants led by Michael Pitfield, secretary to the cabinet.

The $1,000-a-day royal commission was set up by the government after Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell charged that it has lost control of public spending.

The commission is led by Allen Lambert, chairman of the Toronto-Dominion Bank and the man who recommended $60,000-a-year salaries for top bureaucrats while he was head of a private advisory group on the public service.

Another commissioner is O. G. Stoner, deputy trade minister and former Privy Council clerk. Derek Blackburn (NDP-Brant) suggested in the Commons that he may be one of the top public servants fighting the auditor-general's proposal for a senior financial officer overseeing the government's financial operations.

Another member is Prof. John Hodgetts of the University of Toronto, who wrote a book praising the public service as a counter-weight to the excess of politicians.

Snow Follows Quake

Times News Services

Relief workers battled a snowstorm today to bring supplies into mountainous eastern Turkey where officials say about 3,000 persons were killed and 1,000 others injured in an earthquake that destroyed 109 villages.

"There is no electricity. It's snowing and the temperature is —12 degrees Fahrenheit," said Burhan Yavuz Yilmaz, deputy governor of stricken Van Province. "We are rushing tents and breads."

The government mobilized soldiers and sent tents, blankets, food and medical supplies by plane and special train to the rugged area hit by the tremor, the strongest to hit this quake-prone area in 37 years.

Yilmaz estimated that Wednesday afternoon's quake killed 3,000 persons, about 1,000 of them in Muradiye where it was centred. That would be two-thirds of the town's 1,600 population. Officials said the quake toppled 95 per cent of the buildings in the agricultural community about 900 miles east of Istanbul.

The quake and subsequent tremors also were felt in Soviet Armenia and in northwest Iran. No reports of casualties or damage were received from the Soviet Union. But officials of the Red Lion and Sun, the Iranian equivalent of the Red Cross, said five persons were killed near the Turkish border. Iranian newspapers estimated 21 dead and many more injured.

A strong earth tremor struck an area 212 miles southwest of Belgrade on the bed of the Adriatic Sea early today, officials said.

The Serbian Seismological Institute said the quake's epicentre was off Korcula Island. No damage was reported.

DRIVE-IN BREAK-IN

B.C.'s first drive-in liquor store opened its doors with a bang in Langford today. And police are hunting for two men who apparently embarked on a drinking bender to end all benders.

Police said the two men smashed a stolen car into the front of the store, buckling the doors, and fled with 10 bottles of sherry and port.

Next stop was Cobble Hill where the car was abandoned and another stolen. The pair took time to break into a garage and home and steal some beer before driving away.

A Colwood RCMP spokesman said a general alert has been issued for the second stolen car—a yellow Datsun—which apparently is being driven up-Island.

Police said two men rammed the first stolen car through the front door of the liquor store in Westbrook Plaza, 770 Goldstream, at about 6:40 a.m.

Police estimated about 10 bottles of Harvey's Shooting Sherry and Paarl port were taken.

"They didn't seem to be interested in anything else," a police spokesman said. "There was a bottle of $53 cognac sitting right there but they didn't touch it."

Police said there was a "big foot print" on a window and speculated the men tried to kick their way in then decided to ram the car through the door.

SOVIET TAR STUMBLES ON SECRETS?

HALIFAX (CP) — Significantly tighter security measures are being implemented at HMC Dockyard here as a result of a directive from Vice-Admiral Douglas Boyle, Canada's coastal defence commander. He is reported to be seething because a drunken Russian seaman wandered into the dockyard and strolled around for an hour last month.

Late one night last month, the drunken Russian seaman, perhaps not knowing he was in a highly-classified military establishment, was seen wandering through the dockyard but was not challenged by workers until he fell into the harbor, sources say.

Glaucoma Plea Beats Charge

WASHINGTON (AP) — A judge dismissed criminal charges Wednesday against a teacher who said he grew marijuana and smoked it to avoid going blind.

District of Columbia Superior Court Judge James A. Washington Jr. ruled that Robert C. Randall, 29, of Washington was entitled to the "defence of necessity" because marijuana had eased his glaucoma after other treatments proved ineffective.

Steel Price Hiked

WASHINGTON (WP) — Two of the U.S.'s major steel producers, including the third biggest, announced price increases of six per cent on sheet steel, the type used to make automobiles and home appliances like refrigerators. The White House immediately criticized the increases.

Bourassa Resigns

QUEBEC (CP) — Robert Bourassa resigned as premier of Quebec today, following the defeat of his Liberal party in the Nov. 15 provincial election. Parti Quebecois leader Rene Levesque was to be sworn in as the new premier later in the day.

Tanaka Faces Trial

TOKYO (UPI) — Former premier Kakuei Tanaka will go on trial Jan. 27 on charges he received $1.6 million from Lockheed Aircraft Corp., the Tokyo district court said today.

EGG SHORTAGE AT CHRISTMAS?

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumers may face an egg shortage over the Christmas holiday period unless the federal government slaps controls on exports to the United States, the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA), said today.

Max Roytenberg, CEMA's general manager, said because Canadian eggs now are cheaper than those in the U.S., "the possibility exists that during the Christmas season — the period of heaviest consumption — there will be an incentive to ship the lower-priced Canadian eggs to the United States."

That might cause a domestic shortage, he said at a news conference.

PM Rules Out Unity by Force

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Wednesday his government never will use force to keep the country together.

But he told a national television and radio audience it would be a "sin against humanity" if the country disintegrated in the wake of a separatist government's election in Quebec.

"I believe that Canada cannot, indeed . . . must not survive by force," Trudeau said in an address taped at the government's official guest house across the street from his residence.

Canadians, he said, must face the "brutal question" of the country's survival following the Nov. 15 election of Rene Levesque's Parti Quebecois government, a government convinced that "there is no room in Canada for all Canadians."

"The crisis is real . . . and the challenge is immediate."

But while Trudeau concentrated on what he described as a crisis over Confederation, federal opposition leaders maintained that the real crisis centred on the deterioration of the economy and on the Trudeau government.

None of the party leaders, including Trudeau, made statements substantially different from those they made the night Levesque's separatists overthrew the Liberal government of Robert Bourassa.

The federal caucus of the New Democratic Party though, has begun discussion on ways the party might cooperate with the newly-elected Parti Quebecois on economic and social questions where the two parties agree.

While some federal members took pains to point out the social-democratic similarities of the two parties, NDP Leader Ed Broadbent outlined on national television the most contentious issue between the two parties, saying that "to pretend the PQ separatist commitment does not exist is to delude ourselves."

B.C.'s Salaries Highest

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — B.C. continues to lead the nation in average weekly salaries, although a national survey shows all wage increases have been reduced under the Anti-Inflation Board.

According to the survey conducted across the country by the management consulting firm of Stevenson and Kellogg Ltd., B.C. has average weekly earnings of $263.37.

The Canadian median is $230.19 per week. Alberta had a provincial average of $240.41, Saskatchewan was $217.84 and Manitoba was $210.59.

Saskatchewan had the largest actual salary increase percentage increase this year. Firms subject to AIB controls reported salary boosts averaging 11.2 per cent, and non-AIB firms were 13.8 per cent higher. In 1977 the same categories anticipate increases of 8.2 and 11 per cent respectively, which may suggest that the province is in the midst of a drive to catch up with the rest of Canada.

Although increases in the AIB and non-AIB categories were the same for B.C. and Alberta this year — 9.5 and 11.1 per cent respectively — indications are that B.C. increases in 1977 will be slightly higher at 7.7 and 9.0 against 7.5 and 8.7 in the neighboring province.

Starting salaries for B.C. college graduates were found to be highest in all categories except for graduates of science courses.

New Offer on Hospital Site Splits Region

By DON VIPOND

The Capital Region Board Wednesday renewed its struggle to locate a new hospital at Douglas and McKenzie — after word the owners had chopped $500,000 from the property price.

But the decision, after an hour of debate behind closed doors, once again split the board, with Colwood, Langford, View Royal and Central Saanich continuing to argue in favor of a site nearer them on Helmcken Road north of the Trans-Canada Highway.

The 34-acre Helmcken site cost $525,000 without servicing while the original price for the 25-acre property at Douglas and McKenzie was $2.5 million, later $2.25 million and now $1.75 million.

Planners and a majority of the regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission made it clear earlier this year that the Douglas-McKenzie site was their first choice, well ahead of Helmcken because of location and services.

But they reluctantly accepted the Helmcken site after Health Minister Bob McClelland said the other one was too expensive and the provincial government would not pay its usual share for it.

While the Helmcken site is in View Royal, it is close to the Saanich boundary and Saanich has worried aloud about having to pay up to $1 million in extending services to meet the hospital's needs. Estimates for sewering the Helmcken site range from $344,000 to $642,000.

Regional directors have also argued the Helmcken site does not meet their master plan for strategically placed and co-ordinated hospital development, and that the initial size of 250 beds McClelland put on the new hospital further disrupts planning.

Even with widening they claim the Trans-Canada Highway will generate major traffic problems, for one reason because it separates the rapidly-growing western community from the Helmcken site.

The regional board's resumption of the site battle came with word that R and M Development Ltd., whose principals are Fraser McColl and Gordon Rolston, have offerred to Energy Minister Gillespie.

AECL Unworried by Fee

It was then decided, according to Campbell, that the contract should be renegotiated so that less money was paid initially to the agent and so that at least some of the expenses would have to be accounted for by the agent.

Gillespie said that he was "worried" himself about the lack of details provided as an accounting for the original bill, "quite apart from the size of the payment."

AECL chairman Campbell renegotiated the contract with Gillespie's full knowledge and support, the minister indicated.

Campbell also said he wanted to renegotiate the contract because he was concerned about the establishment of a precedent for AECL paying a five per cent commission on CANDU nuclear reactor sales. He was able to renegotiate the commission to a more reasonable one per cent, plus expenses.

Even at the lower commission, the South Korean agent received $5.14-million, not including $8-million in expenses, $132,289 in interest relating to the delay in paying the account while the contract was renegotiated, and an "advance payment for post contract services" of $2-million.

The Commons committee was later told that the agent will still receive a minimum $700,000 a year, in equal quarterly instalments, during each year of construction and warranty coverage of the reactor — some seven or eight years in total.

In addition, the agent will be able to claim expenses, as long as the total of expenses and fee for post contract services doesn't exceed one per cent of the contract price — or $5.14-million.

Assuming that the agent does claim the full fee in the post contract period, he would end up receiving in excess of $20 million from AECL on the South Korean deal, or close to the amount he would have received under the original contract which caused so much concern earlier in 1976.

Faced with a barrage of questions from committee MPs on the South Korean and Argentine agent dealings, AECL revealed that the South Korean agent had offered to open its books to the AECL's auditor, the federal auditor-general.

Gillespie said that he thinks it would be a good idea for the auditor-general to take up the offer but that it was up to the auditor-general to decide, expecially since he raised the questions about the lack of decomentation for the agents fees in the first place.

Both Campbell and Gillespie continued to deny that they had any evidence to suggest that money paid by AECL for agents services in South Korea or Argentina had been used for bribes.

Both refused to answer whether AECL or the government had specifically asked the agents whether any of the money provided by or expenses covered by AECL had in fact been used for bribes in relation of the CANDU sales in the two countries.

Peter Bawden (Conservative—Calgary South) said that it is obvious the South Korean agent was being paid for people he knows and that it would be "very naive" to assume that attempts to influence people in South Korea in connection with the AECL sale had not been going on.

Foster told the Commons committee that there is "no question in my mind that we would have got the South Korean contract without the agent's help."

Gillespie said he challenged the suggestion by AECL president Foster that the federal government in fact knew as early as January, 1975, about the size and nature of the liability AECL would face should a reactor be sold to South Korea — as subsequently happened.

He also questioned whether his predecessor as energy minister, Donald Macdonald, was aware of the details of the original contract with the South Kroean agent — as Foster had indicated.

Neither Gillespie, nor Foster and Campbell, would offer any explanation why the AECL, its board or the government had not become concerned about the five per cent commission, unaccountable as it would be, until a year later, when the bill finally arrived.

Foster had told the Commons committee that nothing had "transpired" in the situation between the time the original contract was signed and the AECL board and the then-energy minister notified and the time the $17.5 million bill arrived and was questioned.

Gillespie also confirmed that he has revamped the AECL board of directors, to give more weight to business representation.

Mugabe, Nkomo In Open Split

GENEVA (UPI) — Differences between black nationalist leaders Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo at the Rhodesia peace talks became an open hostile split today.

Mugabe said he has to go back to Africa for consultations while Nkomo insisted on accepting British proposals so that concrete negotiations can begin on an interim government, highly placed nationalist officials said.

The officials said the "patriotic front" set up by Mugabe and Nkomo is now to all intents and purposes a lame duck although not yet disbanded.

Mugabe told Nkomo he has no mandate to go onto the next stage at the conference, which began exactly four weeks ago, Nkomo's delegation said.

In Salisbury, Rhodesia today announced a 23-month timetable for majority rule that flew in the face of black nationalist demands for a transfer of power on Dec. 1, 1977.

George Smith, Rhodesia's director of legal drafting, proposed an eight-point timetable for the transition and said black demands for majority rule within one year were unrealistic.

A weather disturbance which moved inland early this morning is followed by a Pacific ridge of high pressure which will give clearing skies to many areas of the province today and a decrease in winds along the south coast. A few snowflurries will be present in the eastern interior and cloud will persist in some valleys. As the high pressure area continues inland on Friday skies will tend to become sunny in most areas.

Reaction Amazes Macdonell

VANCOUVER (CP) — Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell said Wednesday he is amazed that Prime Minister Trudeau and Finance Minister Donald Macdonald have appeared to misunderstand his recommendation to appoint a chief financial officer to oversee government spending.

He said in a telephone interview from Ottawa that it is inaccurate for them or anyone else who has read his report, which says the government is losing control of spending, to suggest that a constitutional problem stands in the way of appointing such a financial officer.

"I am absolutely amazed at any possible inference that this person could have any direct connection with Parliament," Macdonell said.

Bill Aims At Bias, Secrecy

OTTAWA (CP) — Legislation aimed at stopping sexist discrimination, telephone hate messages and government secrecy over personal files...is cheduled for Commons presentation today.

The human rights bill, under the guidance of Justice Minister Ron Basford, would set a federal anti-discrimination code and measures to protect individual privacy against government attempts to get information.

Basford described the bill as a revised and stronger version of legislation first introduced in July, 1975, by his predecessor as justice minister, now Transport Minister Otto Lang.

fered to "donate" $500,000 towards construction of the hospital if it goes on their McKenzie-Douglas site.

That, in effect, drops the property price to $1.75 million. The region originally had it surveyed and was told it was worth $2.5 million. In arguing against the price, McClelland had said government assessments put the value much lower.

"I feel the minister has consistently stressed cost as a prime factor in the hospital site selection," Art Young, chairman of the regional hospital board, said today.

"This new offer, while very late, is one that in the board's opinion offers the minister a valid reason to reconsider his position, which was contrary to a large majority of all local authorities both laymen and professional."

McClelland is in Japan examining that country's heroin treatment program and is due back Friday. Regional directors will seek a meeting with him Monday on the site issue.

DROPPED FORK CAUSES CRASH

NANAIMO — A Campbell River man dropped a fork and pranged his car car here, RCMP have reported.

A police spokesman said Gordon Alexander Taylor, 21, was driving on Bay Street while eating potato salad.

He said Taylor dropped his fork, ducked down to pick it up and ran his car into an embankment.

Taylor escaped injury but the car was extensively damaged.

Protest Faced By Developer

Conservationists who fear a Goldstream River townhouse development will endanger the river's salmon population will confront the developer at a public meeting Tuesday.

The Amalgamated Conservation Society claims the 77-unit Glenview Developments complex along the river bank poses a threat to the coho, chum, springs as well as steelhead and cutthroat.

Even if the sewage from the septic tanks is treated, society president Brian Inglis said, it will still contain enough nutrients to speed algea growth in the rive and choke out the salmon.

A number of area residents will also protest the development.

Mary Thyne, of 2904 Mount Wells, said residents object to the fact that 16 townhouses have already been built, and believe they are too close to the river.

But developer Ron Scattergood said he already has Capital Region Board approval to build, and the residents only input would be whether they want 77 rental units or 77 self-owned units.

The difference lies in the zoning — under the current motel zoning, the units would have to be rented, but if the zoning was changed to residential the townhouses could be sold

Regardless of zoning, construction will continue, he said. Scattergood said he is installing five sewage treatment plants — each handling 16 units — which have been approved by the region and by the pollution control branch.

Parents Let Son Die

SYDNEY (Reuter) — The parents of a 16-year-old youth injured in a car accident said today they allowed doctors to disconnect a life-supporting respiratory machine and let their son die.

Graeme John Roberts of Thirroul, 45 miles south of here, died on Monday, a week after he had been critically injured when thrown from a car in a collision.

Graeme's mother, Mrs. J. Roberts, told reporters today that when she and her husband allowed doctors to disconnect the machine, it was "the worst decision we've ever had to make."

Their decision was supported by Frank Stewart, health minister of the Australian territory of New South Wales, who said people kept alive only through life-support systems should be "allowed to die with dignity."

Dr. O. Curtis, medical superintendent of the Sydney hospital where the youth was treated, said the decision was made in consulation with the parents. "Graeme was going to die anyway."

In a similar case in the United States last year, the parents of Karen Anne Quinlan won a protracted legal battle to have their daughter removed from a life-supporting respirator.

When the breathing apparatus was removed, Karen began breathing normally on her own. Medical sources said she might linger on in a vegetative state for years.

Canada Offered Used Fighters

OTTAWA (CP) — In a move that likely will surprise United States defence officials, Grumman Aerospace Corp. has suggested that Canada consider buying up to 125 used Grumman fighter planes from the U.S. Navy.

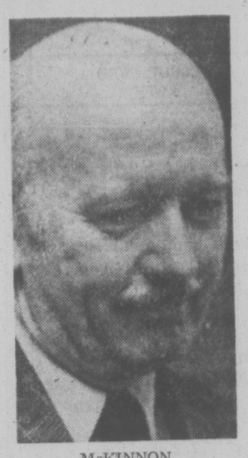
Canadian sources say the idea is tentative. They say the corporation has not even discussed it with the U.S. Navy and there is no indication the planes are for sale.

But while the armed forces say the idea is speculative, it has excited the Progressive Conservative military critic in the Commons.

Allan McKinnon of Victoria, who this week complained in an interview about government spending on everything from planes to tanks, said the proposal is worth study because of the enormous saving it could mean.

The Grumman proposal, made early this year, goes into few details but suggests a price of about $7 million for each F-14 fighter plane that the armed forces would buy from the navy. Depending on whom one talks with, the proposal calls for purchase of anywhere from 40 to 125 aircraft.

In the current armaments world, $7 million is a considered a bargain, although the military says the figure is deceptive and the plane would cost more. The figure most often mentioned in defence circles for new fighter planes is about $2 billion total, compared with the $875 million for 125 of the $7-million plion planes.



McKINNON
. . . enormous saving

The armed forces will need a new aircraft—or more than one kind of aircraft—to replace the CF-101s now used for continental defence, the CF-104s used with Canada's NATO forces in Europe and eventually the CF-5s used for ground support.

It is generally agreed the aircraft should be obtained to replace all three and the air force has expressed interest in the Grumman F-14 as well as two other U.S. fighters.

The defence department now is putting the final touches on an air force report on what it would like in a new plane.

Lt.-Gen. William Carr, air force head, has said the CF-101s should be replaced by the end of the decade or the cost of keeping them in the air will become prohibitive.

Industry sources say Grumman made its proposal as a possible way around the armed forces' tight budget.

Military authorities say the plan is too indefinite to be given more than passing attention at this stage. They say if Grumman is serious it should be prepared to make a more concrete proposal—after talking with the U.S .Navy.

They said the $7-million figure for each plane does not include such things as ground support facilities and aircraft modifications that would be seeded to make them useful to Canada.

McKinnon opposes the defence department spending millions and millions of dollars for aircraft. He said this week the military should not be spending $1 billion on the Aurora patrol aircraft it is buying from Lockheed Aircraft and that it should have bought a plane "off the shelf" to save money,

The Grumman offer should be given serious consideration, he said. Perhaps it would be possible to take a mix of new and second-hand aircraft.

McKinnon also was critical of defence plans to buy the West German Leopard I tank for its European forces for $187 million. He said the tank will be out of date within five years.

The military should be planning to acquire the new Leopard II with a better gun and better armor or a new tank the U.S. government has ordered from Chrysler Corp.

He said the military can get along on tanks rented from the West German army until these tanks are available.

"In five years those Leopard I's are going to be as out of date as are the Centurions we now have," he said.

Canada Votes Against UN Backing of Palestine State

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The UN General Assembly overwhelmingly endorsed Wednesday the idea of a timetable for Israeli withdrawal from territories occupied in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war and the creation of a Palestinian state.

Canada was one of 16 countries which voted against the latest of a series of UN resolutions on Palestinian rights. Canadian delegate Robert Stanbury said the resolution would bypass negotiations altogether.

Stanbury, speaking before the resolution was approved by 90-to-16 votes with 30 abstentions and nine countries absent, said that its adoption would be "tantamount to support for an imposed settlement of the Middle East conflict."

Israeli Ambassador Chaim Herzog said the assembly's action was sinister and calculated to destroy Israel.

Arabs Cautious On Move South

BEIRUT (UPI) — Commanders of the Arab peace force today delayed a decision to send token forces farther south toward the Israeli border in the hope of assurances such a move would not result in Israeli military retaliation.

The right-wing newspaper Al Anwar speculated that "Israel might soon undertake a limited military operation aimed at conquering some Lebanese border villages."

Israeli leaders, meanwhile, have proposed using Lebanese militiamen to set up a buffer zone in southern Lebanon between Syrian forces and Israeli troops patrolling the Jewish state's northern frontier.

The Prime Minister's Remarks

If a person from another planet watched Canada's four political leaders explain the need for national unity Wednesday night Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau would tower above his antagonists from a detached viewpoint. The word "antagonists" is used here because opposition leaders paid little more than lip service to national unity in their self serving attacks on a man who is deeply committed to saving this nation from its own greedy excesses. Yes, Trudeau and his floundering administration have serious faults, faults that could result in their defeat at the next election. But in Canada today we are not talking about internecine political shadings, we are not comparing images. The survival of our nation state, our Canada, is at stake.

Given this most urgent premise, it is shocking to hear Conservative Leader Joe Clark say the answer to confederation is a healthy economy and increased job opportunities. He almost winked adding that he and Rene Levesque could work together "as two men who have no old scores to settle." Canadians want "to restore a sense of competent management to our national economy." The country faces the gravest crisis in its national history and this neophyte whistles about a realignment in the boardroom.

New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent wasn't much better. Sounding flat and trite, he admitted it was foolish to place all the blame for our current contretempts on the Trudeau government, and then proceeded to personally castigate the prime minister. As for Social Credit leader Andre Fortin, the less said the better. Yet all three of these men, who quite properly demanded their share of national television time at this sombre moment, used it for partisan political purposes. To employ this issue as a soap box for individual political ambitions diminishes their stature as Canadians and demeans our political process. All three should hang their heads in shame today.

And then we come to the prime minister. He was eloquent, emotional and oddly moralistic. If only he could bring the same high mindedness to dealing with an auditor general's report as he does to our survival. In an oblique warning to Anglophone provinces who hope Rene Levesque's victory will result in a more decentralized federation (that is more money for the provinces) Trudeau said it is an illusion to think separatists will abandon their goals for new powers. How true. Why is it that Canadians both individually and collectively will prostitute even their country for a short term buck?

But it was when he spoke of Canada that the mind of Pierre Elliot Trudeau flashed like the northern lights. "I'm speaking to you about a deeper brotherhood than blood, a fraternity of hope and charity in the biblical sense. Our two historically intertwined cultures have become the source of our individuality and the very cornerstone of our identity as a people." It is not often a politician gets the last word in this space but the prime minister deserved it Nov. 24. "Our forefathers willed this country into being and we must continue to will it every day."

". . . hello, I'm your new neighbor and I wonder if I could borrow an axe, a crowbar, a sledgehammer and perhaps a few sticks of dynamite? . . ."

Where Was the Mayor?

Ald. Ron McKenzie seems to be carving out a spot on Victoria city council as its resident Scrooge. He's trying hard to fill the shoes of the departed Alf Hood, who for years was a force for moderation and sober second thoughts.

Mckenzie unfortunately lacks Hood's wisdom and common sense. He's trying to save the city money, which these days is a laudable goal, but he obviously hasn't spent much time or thought on his cost-cutting targets or his hamhanded methods.

It was his idea to make Crystal pool pay more of its operating costs, by upping admission prices, turning down the thermostat, shortening the nours the pool was open, and so on. The result was only to drive away swimmers to the warmer, cheaper and more elaborate Oak Bay recreation centre pool. It was an elementary lesson in competitive enterprise one would think city council had learned already.

More recently McKenzie has joined battle with the residents of Blanshard Court, the large subsidized public housing project at Blanshard Street and Hillside Avenue. To listen to Mckenzie, the place is full of petty criminals, prostitutes and people sitting around smoking dope, but also contains people earning $25,000 a year. "But I have not yet documented the information," he said, after letting loose with the charges.

There are grounds for legitimate concern at the project's operating loss of $378,000 this year (Victoria's share is $47,000) but McKenzie's broadside cannonade blaming the poor for being poor is not going to solve the problem.

The sad thing about the McKenzie-Blanshard fuss is that the alderman had to be rebuked by Housing Minister Hugh Curtis, and the rest of city council was silent. Do the other aldermen agree with McKenzie's slurs on the residents of Blanshard Court? Where was Mayor Mike Young, who is mayor of all Victorians, not just the city minus Blanshard Court?

MAURICE WESTERN

Studying Away Our Dollars

OTTAWA — When the Glassco commission on government organization was appointed by the Diefenbaker government, federal budgetary spending was slightly under $6 billion. An annual increase of $250 million was enough in those days to persuade vigilant opposition critics that wanton prodigality, if unchecked, could lead only to national ruin.

The Trudeau government, alarmed by the public findings of the auditor-general, is again appointing a royal commission. Our circumstances, however, have changed rather dramatically in the interval. Finance Minister Donald Macdonald's last budget anticipated spending in the present year of almost $40 billion. Even with restraint, this represented an increase of roughly $6 billion, corresponding quite closely with the total requirements of the last Conservative government for a full year.

Findings Ignored

There is, accordingly, far greater urgency about setting up a better system of financial control than there was when Grant Glassco was appointed to undertake his searching studies. The question is: In these new circumstances do we require, and can we afford another royal commission, however eminent its members, when the price, quite apart from salaries and expenses, is another long delay?

In the normal course, the work of a commission is merely a part, and not necessarily the longest part, of a process. Once a report is published, it becomes the subject of study by government. Experience suggests that, by the time study is completed, the report may be outdated. In some respects, this was the case with the MacPherson report. It required at least a decade to implement the Glassco findings and it is part of the auditor-general's analysis that we are in trouble now because some of them have been ignored to this day.

To quote Macdonell: "It seems clear that the present unsatisfactory and vulnerable situation came about because certain key recommendations on financial management and control were not implemented. Perhaps they were not understood, although the recommendations relating to the decentralization of financial authorities were evidently understood and were fully implemented, culminating in 1969 in the abolition oif the office of the comptroller of the treasury . . . Unfortunately, the concurrent and equally important Glassco recommendation that new counterbalancing controls be instituted and that existing ones be strengthened was not implemented — certainly no in the manner to the extent visualized by Glassco. Thus it is apparent that the situation which now causes my concern has not developed overnight. Control over public funds would appear to have been deteriorating for at least the last 15 years."

There was a persuasive argument for establishing the Glassco commission. This was that the system had not been subjected to searching scrutiny since 1931. In the result, it had to be replaced with a system better suited to the times. But the problem now is not the ambitious one of devising a new system. As analyzed by the auditor-general, it is matter of bringing the existing Glassco system into balance. Macdonell has already recommended correctives to the government.

The auditor-general holds a special position. He is responsible not to the government but parliament. In a sense, he is a permanent royal commissioner. The present incumbent, furthermore, is a very able man.

J. J. MACDONELL
. . . recommendations ignored

Macdonnell, it should be noted, is not reporting to the government for the first time. In 1975 he warned that studies indicated "one clear conclusion: the present stat of the financial management and control systems of departments and agencies of the government of Canada is significantly below acceptable standards of quality and effectiveness."

Pursuing the inquiry, he now draws an analogous conclusion about the crown corporations. "In the majority . . . financial managment and control is weak and ineffective. Moreover, co-ordination and guidance by central government agencies of financial management and control practices in these crown corporations are virtually non-existent."

This may explain a great deal which is otherwise incomprehensible.

The overall conclusion is as follows: "Based on the study of the systems of departments, agencies and crown corporations audited by the auditor-general, financial management and control in the government of Canada is grossly inadequate. Furthermore, it is likely to remain so until the government takes strong, appropriate and effective measures to rectify this critically serious situation."

If it is "critically serious," do we have time for a royal commission followed by the usual extended government studies? And if such a commission is indeed necessary, why did the government not act on the auditor-general's first warning, thus saving a year? After all if things were in such a mess in the departments, it was not to be expected that they would be any better in the semi-autonomous agencies.

"I am deeply concerned," writes the auditor-general "that, on the evidence of the two year examination by the audit office, parliament and, indeed, the government has alost or is close to losing effective control of the pubic purse."

'Critically Serious'

Of about $40 billion, that is to say, in revenues contributed by the nation's taxpayers.

What was this two year study to which Macdonell refers? It was the work of the audit office supported by a blue ribbon committee of outside accountants, almost a commission in itself.

The government, accordng to Robert Andras, is not in disagreement with the recommendations. It is worried, however, about the precise role which the new comptroller-general is to play, especially about lines of responsibility within government and between government and parliament.

These are certainly important matters. But surely, in their nature, they are essentially political and it is for the ruling politicians to tackle and solve them. While they are seeking the advice of outsiders on what they should do, the problems to which the auditor-general has called attention will go unresolved. No doubt, there will be marginal improvements here and there but we shall not have controls effective enough to avert the horrors regularly catalogued in annual reports.

Public patience in this country is not what it used to be. It seems unwise to place further strains upon it by referring the "critically serious" to a royal commission.

Does He Care?

The amount of newspaper space devoted to the housing problem of late might lead the uninformed reader to believe that the B.C. housing department under Hugh Curtis is really concerned with long-term solutions to British Columbia's housing problems. While it is not generally known, it is interesting that in 1975 the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation's British Columbia Region provided $20.8 million to finance the construction of 620 non-profit co-operative housing units in British Columbia. Due to their non-profit nature, these units will provide good quality affordable housing for many years. The housing on completion is occupied by citizens with a wide range of incomes.

It is also interesting that while Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation budgeted $10.4 million for similar housing in 1976, so far this year not one single unit has been approved for construction. Since the development of co-operative housing requires provincial government participation, can it be a coincidence that this housing production ended with the election of the Social Credit government?

Barring any last minute approvals, CMHC will be returning more than $10 million in unspent co-operative housing dollars to the federal treasury on Dec. 31, 1976.

Despite this available housing money, the provincial government refuses to meet our co-operative to discuss the 282 housing units promised us by the New Democratic Party government. By honoring the commitment to our co-operative, the government could keep most of this $10.4 million in British Columbia.

Yet this supposedly cash-conscious government would prefer to spend the next several months, or even years, trying to sell them on the soft condominium market.

In the meantime interest on the money used to construct these 282 North Burnaby housing units is piling up at a rate of $2,500 per day and the housing stands empty.

Selling this housing in the manner proposed by the government will remove it from the non-profit sector thereby placing it beyond the financial reach of the average British Columbia resident within a few short years.

Is the housing department under Mr. Curtis really interested in long-term solutions to the housing problems of British Columbia citizens or is it more interested in providing fees to lawyers and real-estate agents through housing sales?—Larry Whaley, President, Norman Bethune Co-operative Housing Association, Burnaby, B.C.

On the Beaches

In these sardine days when more and more people are pooled together in urban areas, progress to the beaches is of paramount importance. We urge the authorities to save our beaches from encroachment.

To quote one example:

Over a period of 35 years I pioneered the petition to council for the elimination of the dangerous deep descent down the cliff at Braemar Beach in Ardmore. At times, in despair, I felt that the cosy people who lived there, each with their own steps down to the sandy beach, perhaps wanted to keep it to themselves, since they were taxpayers in that region and I was not. Eventually council agreed with me that safe access should be provided to the beach from the right-of-way. We celebrated Thanksgiving Day by photographing the new concrete steps down, as a joy to behold. By coincidence we met there an arthritic old lady who told us that this beach which she loved had been denied to her for years until now, with the help of the massive steel handrail and wide steps she could again anjoy a beach picnic.

Many beach approaches are denied to those who need them by the encroachment of property of those adjoining who seem to want to keep the beaches to themselves. I am sending a copy of this report to Environment Minister Jim Neilsen, asking his support for councils in an effort to open up legal beach access in their territories, especially where the cliff is steep and dangerous as it was at Braemar Beach, Ardmore.—Clarence Goode, 1840 St. Ann Street.

Buy Canadian

Over 40 years ago England was receiving quite a flood of goods from Japan, largely textiles and toys. At this time the cotton mills were in a depressed state in England, there was quite a lot of unemployment. I did not live in the part of the country where we were much affected by this trading. However, I did as did a lot of young men of my day — avoid purchasing Japanese goods. The company for which I worked was Vickers Armstrong Ltd. This company was sending to Japan machine guns, two pounder pom-poms, rangefinders etc. For this England received in return the forementioned textile goods etc.

Around this time Japan was conducting a vicious war against China. It was apparently the strategy and wisdom of our so-called diplomats or intelligence to have a strong Japan with the object of having a strong friendly power to contain communist Russia at the other end. At this time, feeling that I did not want to earn money from such a source, I left Vickers-Armstrongs. I then worked at a government department where we repaired and maintained armaments. Here I found that I was repairing First World War guns, etc. Some of the equipment was so ancient that I asked if it was for the war museum and was involved in a rather hot argument. I pointed out that Japan was being sent the most modern weapons and in return putting our people out of work. I was told that this was trade and this was good for the country. I did remark that perhaps some of the trade would come back and hit us the "back of the neck." It eventually hit the son of the one I argued with.

Today Canada has a terrible unemployment problem and our stores are flooded with Japanese goods. Canada stands more in the relation of a colony to Japan than she ever did to England, a supplier of raw material to the industrial nation. How does it benefit a Canadian, to buy a cheap Japanese article and have added onto the price, the price of paying a fellow Canadian to be unemployed and to have the young people coming along to have the lack of opportunity to learn valuable skills and the erosion of a sense of pride in self and country.

Make it a better Christmas for other Canadians and spend that Christmas shopping money on Canadian products. Leave our greedy merchants up to their gills in Japanese goods. Japan has again been brought up to this industrial state with the help and encouragement of another generation of wise (?) men still wanting to bottle in communist China, and to our detriment. I would have thought the union leaders who called for the one-day protest strike, would have shown more intelligence and said:

"Let us not buy Japanese goods, let us buy Canadian or at least from other places than West German or Japanese stooges of big business"

They have a greater strength in such a move than in a strike. — H. G. Cook, 545 Transit Road.

Thanks, says Mika

May I, through your columns, publicly express my thanks to my wife, mother, close friends, acquaintances and strangers who volunteered some help or money to make my election bid in the Saanich aldermanic race a success?

To all Saanich voters I offer my thanks for a 50 per cent larger turnout than the last non-mayoralty election, along with my hope that civic consciousness will keep on increasing at that rate from now on in our municipality. Certainly I will do my best to spur more interest in council's deliberations.

To the one in two voters who cast a ballot for my program, be assured I will keep faith with your mandate. To those who did not support my program, I pledge a renewed effort to understand your concerns.

To the candidates who were not successful and to all their helpers I offer my tribute for making the election meaningful. It is no coincidence that the only contests which have no losers are the sham elections staged by dictatorships of both the right and left. In our system it is the process, not the personalities, that matters and it was the exertions of the runners-up that made the process work last Saturday.

Contrary to the cliche, in an honest election nobody wastes his or her vote because a vote for unsuccessful candidates also serves as a potent reminder to the winners not to get swelled heads. Without those votes we would all lose because there can be no democracy where there is no dissent. So how about it, non-voters, the next time around?

Finally, to all Saanich residents of every persuasion I make one request and one promise. If you have a problem or advice, phone me or write. I'll listen.—John Mika, 1560 Mileva Lane.

Wallow in It

Just about everyone in B.C. and most parts of Canada must by now have observed the asinine comments made by our minister of human resources after the Quebec election. Let's not kid ourselves that he has any less contempt for many of the people of B.C. Some of his previous utterances are evidence of this. He seems to have the same regard for human resources as he perhaps has for other resources.

It is suggested that in the next cabinet shuffle he be given a field job in the department of agriculture with one of his surplus shovels. There he could really wallow in it.—W. Stott, Sooke.

Trudeau Trapped By Own Hard Line

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — One admires aplomb or "cool," as a response to adversity. When, however, "aplomb" comes to mean rigidity — as it seems to with Pierre Trudeau — it is stupid. Not for him, but for us.

In figurative terms, Rene Levesque and the scale of the PQ victory took Trudeau's constituency out from under him. It deprived him of his base.

And that base? Surely it was a Quebec seen as in Confederation and "a province like the others."

Can he regain the base? How? Let's look at his dilemma, after noting that on election night, the next day in the House and the following Wednesday to his party caucus, Trudeau's aplomb fixed into a tense, constitutional rigidity — as though independence for Quebec was not a topic for dicussion or politics in federal Canada.

Trudeau set his position immediately and the quick confirmation of it by his caucus has really committed the Liberals to him. Unfortunately — so I'd argue — he can't be dumped in favor of someone like Chretien or Turner who might salvage much of Canada as we know it by a change to a policy of "two nations" or "co-operative federalism."

Remember "two nations" was a Stanfield concept and rather close to what Premier Lesage and then Premier Johnson talked about.

"Co-operative federalism" was the federal policy until 1965 when the Trudeau-Marchand-Pelletier trio arrived to turn the party and government towards "one Canada" and Quebec a province like the others.

LEVESQUE . . . better on TV

So Trudeau can hardly be turfed out or asked to leave. This is sad, not least because outside of the French-Canadians one senses the majority of Liberals think he should go now and quietly.

Trudeau really must face the electorate by the fall of 1978. It is obvious that Levesque's mandate goes until 1980 and that the great referendum on independence need not be held until after Trudeau faces the electorate.

This timing seems to set up the requirement — just as does the rigid position he has taken — that Trudeau fight the next election on the same issues he swept the country with in 1968. Putting Quebec in its place. Saving Canada.

Unfortunately for him the theme is shopworn, just as Bourassa found that the Quebec electorate could not be frightened the third time with his form of the same theme.

Even if Trudeau could pull it off, recapturing the West and sweeping most of the federal seats in Quebec, how could he get at Levesque? Indeed, the very sentiments Trudeau must mount to sweep the West almost guarantees a Quebec federal electorate hostile to him. He's an outsider in his old homeplace.

Isn't it almost madness not to acknowledge that French-speaking Quebecers overwhelmingly look to Quebec City as the seat of their government, not to Ottawa? (Perhaps Albertans can understand this best, because their premier is acting out his responsibilities in line with the belief that they look first to Edmonton).

Not only can Levesque choose not to battle Trudeau directly for voter support, he has some personal adventages of great account. The first may seem strange but I think it the crucial one. On television, in French or English, he's even more effective than Trudeau. And TV has been Trudeau's grandest asset.

It has been not so much his common touch (in the sense that Levesque appeals to the common man) as the image and style it has projected of Trudeau as intelligent, quick, tough and dominating.

The nub of the national crisis, for the next 20 months or so, is simply that the PM can neither get at Levesque effectively nor treat him diplomatically and with any flexibility. And Trudeau set himself in this cement, quickly and thoroughly.

If somehow he could bring Levesque to direct debate for the voter's allegiance in Quebec, his prospect is still very poor, simply because he is matched with someone more talented at the public arts of politics. This is overwhelmingly apparent on the French and Quebec stage. It would probably be true for a debate between the two held in Vancouver.

My opinion, of course, is that Trudeau and his conception of federalism became dual anachronisms on election night. Either someone in federal politics gets Ottawa shifted quickly to "co-operative federalism" or "two nations" or even the customs union and the common monetary system that Levesque now talks about will be lost.

Flower Power And the Eagles

THE SUN
An Editorial

What do the furbish lousewort and the bald eagle have in common? More than you might think. There are also some distinct differences between them, one of which might be considered rather important.

The furbish lousewort is a rare wild snapdragon. So rare, in fact, that it was thought to be extinct before 35 specimens of it were found by scientists last summer, growing in an area that would be flooded by the proposed Dickey-Lincoln hydro-electric project on the Upper St. John River in Maine.

Nesting Site

The bald eagle, the national symbol of the United States, is also rare. Rare enough to be included, with the furbish lousewort, on the U.S. department of the interior's endangered species list.

As it happens, one of the places where the bald eagle likes to breed is in the part of the Peace River valley in British Columbia that would be flooded by the Site C hydro-electric project proposed by B.C. Hydro. In fact, Hydro's environmental impact report on the project notes that there is an active nesting site just a mile upstream from one potential dam site.

The furbish losewort, unlike the bald eagle, is not much to look at or much use for anything. In fact, even the scientists who found the lousewort say it's not worth holding up the Dickey-Lincoln project for.

But that is just what it could do, because federal projects in the United States are prohibited by law from destroying rare and endangered flora and fauna. The lousewort has real flower power.

But can the bald eagle do anything about the Site C dam? No. Neither can the trumpeter swan, the Northern three-toed woodpecker, the yellow-bellied sapsucker, the bufflehead, the lesser yellowlegs, the slimy sculpin, Gapper's red-backed mouse, the masked shrew or thousands of other denizens of the Peace River valley, either rare or abundant. Because in B.C., unlike the furbish lousewort in the U.S., they have no legal right to exist.

The valley provides, among other things, some of the best moose pasture in North America. But all that is required to drown it under 1.7 million acre-feet of water — along with the bald eagle nests and the habitats of countless other useful and interesting creatures — is two permits, one from the provincial comptroller of water rights and the other from the federal minister of transport.

Government Whim

Neither of them is required to hold a public hearing before issuing the permit. No statutory procedures are laid down in the law to ensure that Site C, or any other project undertaken by B.C. Hydro or any other public agency, is justified — that the economic, social and environmental impacts are fully explored and properly examined before a sod is turned.

In the Uniteed States, the law requires these things to be done. In B.C., they are done at the whim of the government of the day, subject only to the winds of public opinion.

And that is the real difference between the furbish lousewort and the bald eagle.

How 'El Pulpo' Corrupted Central America

By TOM BUCKLEY

(A review in the New York Times Book Review of An American Company: The Tragedy of United Fruit, by Thomas P. McCann, published by Crown)

One evening in September, 1968, the senior executives of the United Fruit Company waited nervously in the library of the Algonquin Club in Boston. They were about to meet the mysterious figure who that day had bought 10 per cent of the shares of the company and was suspected, correctly, as it turned out, of planning to acquire the rest.

It was a situation that would have brought a ghostly chuckle from the generations of Central American politicians who had been lifted up and cast down by the company in the furtherance of its interests, either acting alone or with the help of the diplomatic and military power of the United States.

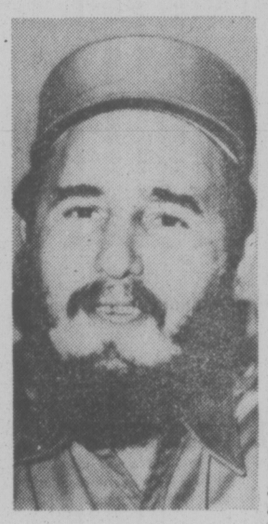
United Fruit wasn't just another rich company about to be plucked by a sharp operator with borrowed money and watered stock. Since its founding in 1899 it had been the preeminent symbol of American economic imperialism. Its viceroys were the real rulers of the countries in which they served, and its officers, directors, bankers and lawyers were often closely connected with the State Department, the National Security Council and the Central Intelligence Agency. In 1954, for example, the C.I.A. organized the overthrow of the government of Jacob Arbenz in Guatemala after he had started seizing 200,000 idle acres that United Fruit had bought to make it unavailable to possible competitors.

Seven years later, two of the company's ships, part of the "Great White Fleet" that at one time numbered 100 ocean-going vessels and sailed under the unofficial slogan, "Every Banana a Guest, Every Passenger a Pest," were used in the C.I.A.-sponsored invasion of Cuba. Fidel Castro, whose father was a foreman on a United Fruit plantation, had seized company properties worth at least $100 million.

The man who had purchased the 10 per cent block of United Fruit's shares, for which he had paid $41 million, making it the third largest transaction in the history of New York Stock Exchange, was Eli M. Black. A native of Poland and an ordained Orthodox rabbi, he had already created a conglomerate, the AMK Corporation, with sales of $1 billion a year.

The author, Thomas McCann, who joined United Fruit as a clerk at the age of 19 in 1951, was the vice-president in charge of public relations when Black began his takeover bid. McCann was not present at the initial meeting, but he had, in a manner of speaking, his eye to the keyhole. From that time until his resignation in 1971 he followed events from the inside, and even afterward he remained close to many of the major participants.

What made United Fruit vulnerable, in those days of frenzied finance, paradoxically, was its conservative, not to say stodgy, management, which had squirreled away $100 million in cash and had freed the company of long-term debt. In comparison with blue-sky shares, its stock performed poorly. When he was ready to move, Black made an offer that few shareholders could refuse. For shares selling at $56 he offered a package of AMK stock, debentures and warrants valued at anywhere from $86 to nearly $100.



CASTRO
. . . he struck back

By September, 1970, he had installed himself as the head of the company, and had begun bringing in his own executives, including of couple of relatives, to help run it. The problem, McCann writes, was not that Black knew nothing about the growing, shipping and marketing of bananas, about Central American politics or the operation of steamships, but that he thought he did.

When the stock market collapsed in 1969, United Fruit's shares plummeted farther than most. A profit of $33 million that year turned into a loss of $2 million in 1970 and $24 million in 1971. With increasing desperation, Black began to sell off subsidiaries at distress prices. He tried to offset the steadily more discouraging numbers with new and imaginative accounting systems, and a self-glorifying public relations campaign.

In 1974, United Fruit — by now merged with AMK to form United Brands — received another blow. Seven Central and South American countries, following the lead of the oil-producing nations, decided jointly to levy a $1 tax on the export of each 40-pound box of bananas. The agreement broke down in the face of the opposition of the growers and the tax was cut to 25 cents. But United Brands lost $70 million that year and Black began to show signs of cracking up emotionally.

On Feb. 3, 1975, with his executives in revolt, faced with dismissal himself by the board of directors, his own financial resources nearly exhausted, Black smashed through a window in his office on the 44th floor of the Pan Am Building in New York and jumped to his death.

Not long afterward it became known that the Securities and Exchange Commission had been investigating the company, as Black was aware. It turned out that he had authorized the payment of a bribe of $1.25 million to the president of Honduras to get the export tax reduced.

The overthrow of the Honduran government by outraged citizens and, conceivably, by those who hadn't received their fair share of the loot, may turn out to be the last coup d'etat for which "El Pulpo" — the Octopus, as United Fruit had long been known in the countries where it was established — can be held responsible. Even before Black's takeover, it had begun to reform its practices, and the trend has been accelerated since his death.

McCann describes the way in which the company's public relations staff, assisted by outside experts like Edward L. Berbays, systematically misled the press and the public. Journalists tended to find it easier to accept the company's view that President Arbenz of Guatemala was a tool of Moscow after enjoying its hospitality in the tropical paradises it maintained for its senior officials. Whether Arbenz was or wasn't is problematical, but he was clearly not a tool of United Fruit.

'I Think I'd Want to Die'

By B. D. COLEN

BELCHERTOWN, Mass. — It is said of Joseph Saikewicz that he was profoundly mentally retarded, which in part explains why he was never toilet-trained and never learned to speak.

For 53 of his 67 years, Saikewicz was kept by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in what it calls its school for the retarded. From 1928 until his death 10 weeks ago, the Belchertown State School here was the only home he knew.

There is no way to know what he might have accomplished, in his limited way, had he had 53 years of what is now considered to be proper care and training for a severely-retarded person.

Had he not had a blood test four months before his death as part of recent upgrading of care at Belchertown, Joseph Saikewicz would have died, as he lived, one of the lost souls roaming the grounds of this forbidding, though sylvan institution.

That blood test inadvertently led to the discovery that Joseph Saikewicz was dying of myeloblastic leukemia, a fatal, particularly virulent form of cancer of the blood that infects the blood-producing bone marrow.

The discovery of the disease posed Massachusetts authorities with a question of profound social, ethical, moral and financial implications: Should Joseph Saikewicz's leukemia be treated with chemotherapy, which would, under the best of circumstances, extend his life a few months, or, like Karen Ann Quinlan, a comatose women in New Jersey, did he have a right to die naturally without interference from the state?

If it were decided that Saikewicz need not be treated, could not such a decision be viewed as the final abandonment of a man neglected by society all his life? What effect would such a decision have on the "right to treatment," which courts have held applies to all retarded persons? And would such a decision ultimately pave the way for euthanasia, for the grisly emptying by attrition of all our mental institutions?

On the other hand, if Saikewicz were treated, wouldn't he be forced to endure the agony of chemotherapy — the vomiting, the fevers, the hair falling out — only to gain a few more months of Belchertown? Wouldn't he be subjected to a treatment he could neither understand nor appreciate? Wouldn't he be deprived of the right of privacy accorded Miss Quinlan when New Jersey's highest court found that the machines thought to be sustaining her life could be withdrawn?

When Belchertown's director, Dr. William Jones, went into Hampshire County probate court seeking permission to have Saikewicz treated, Judge Harry Jekanowski appointed a young local lawyer to act as Saikewicz's guardian for the legal proceedings.

"I didn't think I had any options," the lawyer, Patrick Melnik, said. "As far as I was concerned, the right to life and the right to treatment are the most fundamental rights. I assumed I was just to serve as a conduit" for approving treatment.

Much to his surprise, Melnik found that the physicians he consulted were against treating Saikewicz.

The physicians argued that because of the patient's age, he would have only a 30-to-50-per-cent chance of achieving a two-to 13-month remission of the disease. The treatments, they pointed out, would cause great pain and suffering.

The doctors also said treatment would be difficult because co-operation is essential and Saikewicz would resist treatment.

Originally, Melnik said, he felt the doctors "would just rather let him slide by and use the resources for a younger individual. I felt he should at least get the treatments anyone else would get."

Melnik later changed his mind, deciding he could not support treatment because Saikewicz "could not understand the excruciating pain he'd be going through."

The state, through director Jones and Paul Rogers, a lawyer attached to Belchertown, argued that the state had an obligation to protect life and treat Saikewicz. Given the testimony that the vast majority of competent individuals would choose treatment, Saikewicz must be treated, they argued.

Judge Jekanowski was not persuaded and ruled that Saikewicz should not be given chemotherapy.

"I think I'd want to die," the 68-year-old judge said during an interview in his chambers. "If I couldn't be cured, I wouldn't want to live."

Both sides agreed that the case was important enough to arrange an immediate appeal to the Massachusetts Supreme Court. The state attorney-general's office filed a brief in favor of treatment, and gained permission for the office's civil rights division to file an amicus brief against treatment — something unprecedented in Massachusetts legal history.

Whatever the outcome of the case, it will not affect Joseph Saikewicz. He died 10 weeks ago, and the appeal court's judgment has not yet been handed down.

Robert Bonin, first assistant attorney-general, feels the case has helped achieve "a heightened awareness of the legal right to treatment."

"On an individual basis, for this particular person, I believe we made a good decision," said Jones, an outspoken advocate of the rights of the retarded. "But to generalize would be a great error. This is a population of great vulnerability.

"Does this move us toward euthanasia? It very much frightens me what people might do with this. If you look at this case, and you look at Quinlan, it begins to raise questions.

"There is a quality of life," said Jones, "below which we might not value life. As we treat anyone of us, so we treat all of us."

Leasing Tax Shelters to End

MANAGEMENT MEMO

By PAUL GASTER
Touche, Ross & Co.

The past few years have seen the disappearance of some of our better known tax shelters. This began in 1972 with the demise of the rental building tax shelter although it was partially replaced in 1974 with the introduction of the multiple unit residential rental building (MURRB). While MURRB reinstated the rental building as a tax shelter, the provisions were in no way as generous as the pre-1972 rules and to date have not been widely used.

On May 25 this year, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald dropped a quiet bombshell on leasing tax shelters. He stated that the government does not intend that capital cost allowances be available for unwarranted use by taxpayers as a means of sheltering income from its fair burden of taxation. Specifically, taxpayers will not be allowed to claim capital cost allowances on leased equipment in excess of the net rental income from that type of property. This new limit will apply to leased moveable property acquired after May 25, 1976, to both individuals and corporations (other than some specified corporations whose principal business is in the field.)

This means that taxpayers must now look elsewhere for suitable ways of minimizing and-or deferring income taxes.

Before examining what is currently available to an individual one should perhaps caution the reader that any tax shelter investment should stand on its own from an economic investment point of view. The tax write-off aspects should always be secondary. If they are not, an individual may find that his investment is not viable and may suffer an actual economic loss. In such circumstances, any resultant tax write-off would be very welcome but will not compensate for the loss of his investment capital. The maxim, then, is "caveat emptor."

The Multiple Unit Residential Rental Building and tax ence shares are two tax shelter possibilities currently available to individuals.

In the case of the former, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation has certified that constructions started between November 19, 1974, and December 31, 1977, are not subject to the rental loss restrictions applicable to all other rental buildings owned by individuals. Consequently, depreciation tax losses may be created and used to reduce otherwise taxable income. The depreciation rates available for such properties are either 5 per cent or 10 per cent depending on the type of structure and are claimed on a declining balance basis. For a property to qualify as a MURRB, a certificate must be obtained from CMHC. In addition, certain other requirements are necessary in relation to the amount of space to be used for rental and related services.

Interestingly, Revenue Canada is interpreting multiple dwelling unit to mean "more than one unit." Consequently, qualifying buildings are considered to include not only high rise residential accommodations but also much smaller residential buildings which may be in the price range of taxpayers not able to invest in the larger projects, for example, duplexes and condominiums.

In recent months, some public companies have issued tax deferred exchangeable preference shares. Dividends received on such shares are "tax deferred" which means that they do not give rise to immediate income tax. Instead, they reduce the tax cost of the shares held and may result in capital gains to the owner on a subsequent sale or redemption of his shares. Other features of such shares are that they are usually redeemable at par after a specific number of years.

Alternatively, they can be exchanged or converted one for one for preference shares giving the investor the right to receive taxable dividends, usually at a higher rate of return. Finally, if the conversion option is exercised, no tax will arise at that time. Instead, the tax will be postponed until the new share received on conversion is disposed of. There is thus the attractive possibility of deferring income tax almost indefinitely on immediate cash dividends.

A taxpayer who is currently earning interest on an annual basis could therefore reinvest his funds in tax deferred exchangeable preference shares and defer payment of tax on the income for some years.

Similarly, an individual contemplating the purchase of Canadian portfolio investments earning taxable dividends (taxable annually) could instead acquire tax deferred shares. However, competent advice should always be sought prior to embarking on such an investment. Facts such as the personal tax rate of the investor and alternative investment yields must be taken into account. But when the circumstances are right, tax deferred shares over a number of years can provide the investor with a significantly greater after-tax return than taxable dividends or interest earning investment.

The more speculative investor may also consider a more exotic tax shelter, a Canadian film. These films offer 100 per cent tax write-off in the year of acquisition with the future revenues taxable in the year of receipt. Although Revenue Canada has attacked these tax shelter investments, the attack has normally centred on the financing aspect and the amount that the investor has "at risk." Properly structured, these moves can be a valid tax shelter but to avoid Revenue Canada objection will also contain an investment risk.

TRANS MOUNTAIN SEEKS NORTHERN LINE

VANCOUVER (CP) In a matter of weeks Trans Mountain Pipe Line Co. Ltd. of Vancouver will formally apply to the National Energy Board of Ottawa for approval to build a $450 million oil pipeline across northern B.C.

Trans Mountain will argue that its 760-mile line, linking a proposed tanker terminal in Kitimat with Alberta's oil pipeline network to the U.S., will benefit B.C. communities both in permanent jobs and millions of dollars in new investment.

Opponents of the project charge it poses an unacceptable environmental threat both to the coastal region around Kitimat and the rugged interior wilderness through which the line would pass.

What is worse, they say, the pipeline is designed to meet only American needs — Canada is to act as a land bridge carrying Alaskan oil to thirsty refineries in the U.S. midwest.

Trans Mountain is seeking approval to build a tanker terminal at Kitimat capable of unloading two 300,000-ton supertankers at once.

From Kitimat, oil shipped from Alaska and the Mideast would flow through a 30-inch line to Terrace, then along an existing natural gas pipeline route through the Telkwa Pass to Prince George and on to Edmonton.

At full capacity, the line would deliver 600,000 barrels of oil to Edmonton daily for transmission through existing Alberta lines to the U.S.

Trans Mountain heads a consortium that includes Interprovincial Pipeline Co., Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Co. and six American refineries.

Rogers Cable Bids for Premier

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Cablevision Ltd. of Vancouver and Rogers Telecommunications Ltd. of Toronto announced Tuesday a new financial deal, less than two weeks after they called off a previous one.

The first, in which Rogers intended to take over control of Premier, was terminated Nov. 10 after a decision by the Canadian Radio-Television and Communications Commission (CRTC) to cancel a scheduled public hearing on the takeover in Vancouver.

The CRTC decided instead to hold two public hearings on the takeover, the first in Toronto Dec. 7, the second in Vancouver Jan. 25 to enable greater public participation in the hearings.

If the takeover had been approved, it would have made Rogers-Premier the leading cable owner in Canada and placed the company in a commanding position as a signal carrier for any contemplated pay-TV network.

Unlike the first deal that would have had Rogers acquire a 50-per-cent controlling share of Premier, the new one, says Premier president Stuart Wallace, "is for considerable less."

It involves purchase of 316,534 Premier shares by Rogers for $4,747,000. These shares, representing 9.5 per cent of the total, are held by the company's chairman of the board Syd Welsh, Garth Pither and the estate of the late Bud J. Shepard.

Rogers would be the largest single shareholder with 36.2 per cent, although the new agreement leaves the voting proxy of new newly-acquired 9.5 percentage of shares with Welsh.

Second-largest shareholder would be the Columbia Broadcasting System in the United States which owns 18.5 per cent of the shares.

Bank of Nova Scotia

The Bank of Nova Scotia has lowered its prime lending rate by one half of a percentage point to 9¾ per cent.

A bank statement said the announcement was in response to the Bank of Canada lowering its prime interest rate.

The bank said its preferred lending rate for small business drops to 9½ per cent and NHA and conventional mortgage rates go down by one half of a percentage point to 11 per cent and 11¼ per cent respectively.

The interest rate on non-chequing savings will be lowered one half of a percentage point to 7½ per cent as of Dec. 1, the bank said.

Polysar

Polysar Ltd. has announced net income of $79 million or $2.20 a share for the nine months ended Sept. 30, compared with a loss of $2.5 million or $2.27 a share for the corresponding period last year.

However, the company lost $1.1 million or $1.21 a share for the three months ended Sept. 30, compared with a gain of $1.8 million or 38 cents a share in the same three-month period in 1975.

Company president Ian Rush said the third-quarter earnings were adversely affected by weakness in the latex and resins businesses and in some segments of world-wide rubber markets.

"The considerable reduced vigor apparent in the economies of our world markets and strong competitive forces in a period of uncertain demand indicate that earnings in the next several months will not be as strong as we had earlier anticipated," he said.

Falconbridge

Falconbridge International Ltd., offshore marketing unit of Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd., Toronto, says it will reduce ferronickel prices by eight cents a pound of nickel content or orders received by Dec. 31 for delivery in the first quarter of 1977.

For United States customers participating in the program, the new price will be $2.28 U.S. a pound of nickel contained in ferronickel.

For the nine months ended Sept. 30, the company reported ferronickel deliveries at 38.2 million pounds, up from 37.5 million last year.

Metal market analysts say nickel supply is expected to exceed demand during in 1977, bringing pressures on pricing in view of the growing competition for markets.

Cassiar

Cassiar Asbestos Corp. Ltd. has announced net earnings of $7.27 million or $1.32 a share for the nine months ended Sept. 30, up from $7.02 million or $1.28 a share for the corresponding period in 1975.

A strike at the Vancouver-based company's asbestos mine in Cassiar cut third-quarter earnings to $897,314 or 16 cents a share from $2.58 million or 47 cents a share.

Revenue for the nine months was $56.3 million, down from $59.4 million in 1975.

Company directors said that since the strike ended in August, production at Cassiar has recovered at a faster rate than was anticipated.

Inco

Inco Ltd. has increased its offer to $8 cash per share from $7 in a proposal to merge one of its subsidiaries with Continental Capital Corp., a San Francisco firm with investments in a number of risk-capital type companies. Inco said if the proposal is accepted, the merger will cost it $5.4 million.

Criticizing Court, Lawyer Obtains a Stiffer Penalty

If he hadn't had so much to say, a 25-year-old Salt Spring Island man might have got a conditional discharge in county court Wednesday for attempted fraud of two insurance companies.

But Adrian Jonker, manager of the Harbor House Hotel in Ganges, was fined $500 on each of the two counts and was placed on probation for two years.

And if he lived on Vancouver Island instead of Salt Spring Island, he would have been sentenced to an intermittent jail term — spending weekends in jail and weekdays out of custody.

The turn of events came at the completion of submissions on sentencing by Crown counsel Nicholas Lang and defence counsel Bruce McConnan.

McConnan told Judge Leslie Cashman that Jonker had been in Canada four years, from Holland, had always worked, had a good job still open to him, supported his wife and child and had no criminal record in either country.

Jonker had already paid one penalty because he lost a $37,000 in a house fire and the attempted fraud was the difference between $37,000 damage and the value of two policies, $45,000.

(Fraud generally renders insurance policies invalid).

Lang suggested Judge Cashman consider a substantial fine and probation, or a short term in jail, calling Jonker's action "deliberate and planned fraud."

Judge Cashman then asked Jonker if he had anything to say before sentence was passed.

Convicted persons usually say nothing at this stage, but Jonker told Judge Cashman he believed he was not guilty and will appeal, perhaps with a new lawyer, and felt some of the facts presented to coutt had been turned around.

Judge Cashman called a recess, and half an hour later when court resumed he told Jonker he could be sentenced to as much as five years for the offence.

"I assume from the verdict that the jury did not believe you," he said.

He said McConnan gave an able defence and "did everything for you I would expect any counsel to have done."

"The remarks you made indicate you learned absolutely nothing from this trial or from the jury's verdict," he said.

Until the remarks by Jonker, "I was seriously considering a conditional discharge but your remarks convinced me that is not appropriate."

Judge Cashman made it clear he was referring to Jonker's remarks about presentation of the Crown and defence cases in court, not to his planned appeal or maintenance of innocence.

He said: "I really ought to" jail Jonker and if he lived on Vancouver Island would have "no hesitation" in sentencing him to an intermittent term.

But because he was off the Island and would have to travel to and from the Island to serve jail time, "and only because of that," and not wanting to "jeopardize your employment anymore than you have jeopardized it" and not wishing to punish his family, he would not impose a jail term.

Judge Cashman said a fine was appropriate, and he gave Jonker until June 1, 1977, to pay the $1,000, or in default serve two months in jail. One condition of the two-year probation is that he must report once a month to a probation officer.

A county court jury found Jonker guilty Nov. 12 of attempted fraud of two insurance companies which wrote policies on his household property.

Jonker told the jury he had no intention of using deceit, falsehood or other fraudulant means in making a claim for insurance compensation amounting to $20,000 from Dominion Insurance Corp. and $25,000 from Canadian Indemnity Corp.

The fire, in December, 1975, wiped out his personal belongings in the rented house.

In his defence, Jonker said he believed he had insurance coverage by one company and when he dealt with adjusters after the fire he believed both men were working for the same insurer.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 23-year-old woman was given a conditional discharge by Judge Blake Allan in provincial court Wednesday after she pleaded guilty to shoplifting.

Court was told Susan Steeves of 1162 McClure stole $3.05 worth of cosmetics from a Douglas Street drug store on Nov. 19.

Miss Steeves said she did a foolish thing and promised never to do it again.

The judge said he rarely granted a conditional discharge, but would in this case. He placed the accused on six months probation.

Violet J. White, 62, of 991 McClure, was ordered to do 40 hours of community service work after she pleaded guilty to stealing $2.90 worth of cosmetics from Woolworth's on Douglas.

When the judge asked her if her husband knew she was in court on a theft charge, Mrs. White said he didn't.

The judge suspended her sentence for six months and placed her on probation for that period.

Marigold Co-Op Officially Open

Housing Minister Hugh Curtis has officially opened the 86-unit Marigold co-operative housing complex at Interurban and Columbine.

Co-op shareholders began occupying the units in May and the complex was filled by August. The provincial housing corporation, Dunhill Developments, constructed the complex.

In addition to Curtis who is also the MLA for the area, guests at the opening included representatives from Dunhill, the federal ministry of housing, Central Mortgage and Housing, the municipality of Saanich, Columbia Housing co-op, the construction company and organized labor.

Shareholders in the co-op invested between $1,750 and $2,800 each depending on the size of the unit, and pay a monthly fee that includes employing a manager.

New Aims Urged in North

SASKATOON (CP) — People in northern areas feel alienated and unable to have a voice in their own development and governments must adopt a new role in the region, the Canadian Council on Rural Development said Wednesday.

The council said governments in the mid-north — areas north of the agricultural and more densely-settled parts of British Columbia, the Prairies, Ontario, Qiebec and Newfoundland-Labrador — are not designed "to support the delivery of resources to the community as a major thrust."

The council, in a report, proposed a new supportive role for governments working in the regions and outlined a development plan giving local northern governments responsibility for initiating and directing development.

"At present, in the majority of cases, the council feels government has not been in a position to respond to the initiative of people in the mid-north."

The report cited two approaches designed to deal with the development needs of remote communities and underdeveloped areas, one being the single-agency concept — such as the Department of Northern Saskatchewan.

"If a single channel is blocked, for whatever reasons, local people have no other effective channel to the central government," the group said.

"Therefore, the single-agency . . . in and of itself does not accomplish northern development objectives."

The second concept was the special development unit — such as the Human Resources Development Agency used both in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

The advantage is such a program can draw on its own resources or other government departments to give a fast response to local northern needs on an interim basis.

However, this approach can only be successful if supported at the cabinet level by a strong commitment and "clear policies which are understood and followed by the civil service."

In proposing its new system, called the locally-based development strategy, the council said it must be based on transitional structures both in central government and at the community level.

"This will avoid permanent addition to bureaucracy that may be required only at an interim basis."

Wagner, Clark In Truce

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA (Thomson) — Tory leader Joe Clark and Claude Wagner (PC—Ste. Hyacinthe— didnt exactly kiss and make up but they did reach an uneasy truce at Wednesday's Conservative caucus.

Wagner steadfastly refused to apologize for things said last weekend about Clark's tampering with Quebec P.C. Association executive elections.

"God knows no one would ask me to apologize," Wagner told reporters after the meeting.

"You don't apologize for something you said that was right. I consider the matter closed," he said.

The flare-up that put strains on the Clark-Wagner relationship occurred when Wagner accused Party headquarters and Clark of imposing Roch LaSalle (PC—Joliet) as president of the Quebec Conservative Association.

Wagner backed another candidate and left the meeting before final balloting when it was obvious LaSalle was going to win.

At the caucus meeting yesterday several members expressed the view that Wagner should apologize publicly for statements he had made about Clark's interference.

However, Wagner and others later said Mr. Clark had not asked for an apology.

Some members of caucus were also said to have supported Wagner's contention that headquarters should be careful about trying to influence affairs of provincial associations.

WHELAN RAPS PRESS

BRANDON (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan issued a verbal blast at newsmen for reporting "out of context" remarks he made at a Calgary press conference last week.

"I have discovered that some reporters always get their facts wrong," he told delegates at a meeting of the Union of Manitoba Municipalities Wednesday.

"They mix up facts and figures, even my jokes," he said.

Whelan was referring to a report that quoted him as saying, "beef makes people ferocious because if you eat better you love more."

"I had said, 'increased consumption of beef could lead to unrest,' and when I said that I was laughing and so were they," Whelan commented.

"The only paper that reported the remark in the context in which it was made was the Toronto Star," he said.

Whelan said reporters left out important aspects of the news conference, especially the announcement that the central egg marketing agency was lowering egg prices by two cents a dozen.

"Did you read that anywhere?" asked Whelan. "When CEMA increased prices by one cent a dozen that made headlines. They should have had headlines twice as big but it wasn't even mentioned."

"I guess that's freedom of the press," he said.

Whelan flew to Brandon directly from Ottawa in a government jet-star, and was to return to the capital after addressing the meeting.

"I came in one of those aircraft bought by John Diefenbaker in 1962," Whelan said.

"In Canada business corporations have 90 airplanes. Executive time is important; Canada is a big country. The only way I can be here and back in Ottawa for a meeting at 8 p.m. is to use this aircraft."

Big Wheat Sale To Poland

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada announced Wednesday a grain sale to Poland of between 750,000 and 1.2 million metric tonnes of wheat, oats and barley during the next three years.

Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board, formally signed the agreement here with H. Pruchniewicz, the Polish first vice-minister of foreign trade.

Should Poland agree to purchase the maximum 1.2 million metric tonnes or about 40 million bushels, the deal could be worth about $120 million to Canada, based on an average price of $3 a bushel, spokesmen said.

Signing of the agreement coincided with the visit of a Polish trade delegation to Canada, following several months of negotiations.

The three-year agreement replaces a similar deal that expires at the end of this year. The two countries have negotiated a number of long-term contracts, dating back to 1956.

Canada harvested a record wheat crop this year but international prices have dropped significantly following good crops in other major wheat-producing countries.

Lang confirmed a wheat sale last week estimated at some 160 million bushels to several grain trading companies in the United States.

A Canadian trade delegation visiting the Soviet Union last month was told Canada would continue to be a favored supplier for that country, although sales this year were not likely to match the high levels of previous years.

Prices for the number 1 grade of wheat marketed by the wheat board have slipped to about $3.25 a bushel from levels least year of nearly $5 a bushel.

They got action. Niagara was their key.

Happiness. To the Howard L. Glynns it was a 6-room, three-bedroom, bungalow with enough property for two young children and one very large dog. Niagara knows a lot about the Glynn's kind of happiness. We also know a lot about money. That's our business. Mortgage money to purchase a new home, money for home improvements, a new car, money to consolidate bills or refinance an existing mortgage. If what stands between you and a thing called happiness is a thing called money, come in and sit down with the people you've come to know at Niagara. We'll show you how sometimes all it takes to be a little happier is to put a little money into action.

Bennett to Ask Ottawa For Coal Exporting Aid

CRANBROOK (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett and three other cabinet ministers will go to Ottawa next week to discuss the province's coal industry and seek federal involvement in exporting additional coal to Japan.

The announcement was made Wednesday night by provinical Mines and Petroleum Resources Minister Jim Chabot at a meeting of the Cranbrook - Kimberley chamber of mines.

Chabot arrived at this southeastern British Columbia community Wednesday in preparation for a cabinet meeting today, part of a series being held throughout the province.

Prospectors asked Chabot to change the government's claim-staking regulations so that a less costly and difficult method could be used in the mountainous East Kootenays.

Under the modified grid system now in effect, prospectors must place four stakes in a north-south direction. The chamber asked that the regulations be changed so that a two-post staking system could be used.

Chabot said he would consider the changes.

4-H Posts Silos With Gas Warning

Four-H club members on Vancouver Island will visit dairy farms within the next two weeks in the third phase of a campaign to eliminate silo deaths.

The campaign warning of lethal gases generated in feed silos is sponsored jointly by 4-H, the provincial agriculture department and B.C. Federation of Agriculture, which last summer provided $4,000 toward literature and warning signs distributed by 4-H Club members in the Fraser Valley and Okanagan.

Last year three persons died as a result of silo gas in the Fraser Valley.

Saanich Peninsula and other areas south of the Malahat will be visited Thursday. Club members will talk to farmers, install warning signs on silos and make an inventory of silos.

Saturday they will cover the Courtenay, Nanaimo, Port Alberni, Cedar and Parksville-Qualicum areas, moving Dec. 4 to the Cowichan-Duncan area. About 40 farms are believed to operate silos.

By spring it is expected the whole province will have been canvassed.

The federation pays 4-H $1 for each installed sign in support of the club's youth development foundation.

X-Ray Radiation Overdose Possible from Faulty Dental Equipment, Ottawa Warns

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal health department has alerted dentists to a potential hazard in their automatic X-ray timers.

Dr. A. H. Booth, director of the federal radiation protection bureau, said Wednesday his department has heard of three instances in which hand held outomatic timers did not shut off.

In those instances the radiation continued until dentists removed their thumbs from the timer. The timers are supposed to turn off the X-ray automatically at a predetermined time.

Dr. Booth said patients face minimal risk from any radiation overdose but the length of exposure did violate regulations.

In an information letter to all dentists, the federal health protection branch asked to be informed of any other incidents involving the X-ray timers.

Bubble Brigade

Heave ho and up she goes!

Well, not quite perhaps. But a 10-man crew from Victoria Paving Co. was certainly putting everything into final preparations today for the erection of the giant bubble that will house Oak Bay's new indoor four-court tennis centre.

Play will begin on the four covered courts on Dec. 1 and the official opening of the centre, which will cost some half-a-million dollars, is set for Dec. 9.

Rich Morris, the owner of the Thermo-Flex company that is supplying the bubble, is here from Salina, Kansas, to oversee the hoist and was there today watching the men roll out the canvas.

"Several hours will be spent checking around the edges to make sure it's well anchored down to provide a complete air seal," explained Oak Bay Recreation Centre director Bill Johnson.

"We expect to put the bubble up early Friday morning," he added. "It only takes 30 minutes to rise once they start blasting the air in."

And the name of the particular model of bubble that Oak Bay will have between its present centre and the high school?

Cloud Nine, it's called. And, quips Johnson:

"That's the nearest most of us will get to Heaven!"

Delay, You Pay Oak Bay Told

Oak Bay was warned at Wednesday's meeting of the Capital Region Board that it will be sent the bill if it causes delays which hike the price of a giant sewage project.

The warning came with word that Oak Bay is still examining alternatives to locating a large sewage pumping station at Shoal Bay, a move vehemently opposed by neighbors earlier this year.

Saanich and Victoria are partners with Oak Bay in the project, which will see some of the sewage from all three municipalities diverted to Clover Point where a new 6,000-foot outfall will discharge it into Juan de Fuca Strait. Raw sewage is now discharged there at tideline.

Part of the plan involves diverting sewage now being dumped at McMicking Point outfall in Oak Bay to the much longer Clover Point outfall and this is what requires the pumping station at Shoal Bay or vicinity.

Victoria Mayor Mike Young and Saanich Mayor Ed Lum expressed concern Wednesday, as did board chairman Jim Campbell, when Oak Bay's representative, Ald. Shirley Dowell, said the site question needs more study.

When Dowell suggested Victoria and Saanich had caused earlier delays in settling on a cost-sharing formula, Campbell said true or not that hardly constitutes a defence for more delays once an agreement had been reached.

In other business, a majority of the board voted against rezoning a 28-acre parcel in Langford where Ridley Brothers want to develop a lumber store and yard initially.

The property, on Jacklin opposite Jenkins, is where a town centre is shown on the draft community plan of the area. Most directors were not opposed to the lumber business but felt it did not require rezoning to extended commercial of such a large parcel. Some suggested the developer proceed under a land-use contract.

Shipyard Mediator Trying

Labor mediator Fred Geddes met union spokesmen in Vancouver today in a further effort to avert a strike in B.C.'s two major shipyards.

Employees at Burrard Dry Dock Ltd. and Yarrows Ltd. and at two subsidiary operations of Quadra Steel Ltd. have voted in favor of a strike action to back contract demands.

Earlier, James McAvoy, of the Joint Shipyards Conference of unions, said Geddes would be asked to withdraw as mediator.

Campbell Warms To Bawlf Report

Capital Regional District chairman Jim Campbell today said he would like to see the provincial government implement the Bawlf housing report without the proposed threat to withhold grants to unco-operative municipalities.

"The program could work very well but it must be based on help and co-operation, not threats," he said.

Campbell said he had at first been negative toward the report, which was released this month, but now views it favorably based upon a full reading.

"I was concerned about the childish talk about withholding our grants. I believe the government should implement the report soon but without the threats."

The report, written by Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf, says the provincial government should ask a regional district to provide a quota of various housing types.

The regional district, in turn, would distribute this quota among the municipalities.

A storm arose over a Bawlf recommendation that any municipality that refuses to meet its quota should lose all provincial government grants.

"That kind of talk is childish," Campbell said.

"We should be co-operating. If the provincial government wants us to do these things, they should encourage us by providing financial assistance. That is the way it should be done," Campbell said.

He said the Capital Regional District would be pleased to receive housing quotas from the provincial government and would distribute these quotas among local municipalities.

"We would give a municipality a quota based upon the idea that it would be reasonable for them to provide that kind of housing.

"If they don't carry out the quota, we (the Capital Regional District board) would be very interested in finding out why. Maybe they have a good reason. Maybe they can't afford it. Then we could decide what we would do about it."

The key to the success of the Bawlf report would be provincial government grants large enough to remove the burden of costs from the municipalities.

"Housing doesn't pay its way in municipal taxes. If the provincial government saddles a municipality with the responsibility to provide housing, it should also supply the funds to help the municipality meet this responsibility."

He said the province and municipality form a client-agent relationship. The province, as client, asks the agent to carry out various tasks but sometimes neglects to pay the agent.

"Every time it (the provincial government) gives a municipality a new task, it should supply the funds to pay for it or it should give the municipality the power to raise the money required. The main problem has been that the government continues to give municipalities new responsibilities without providing the funds."

He said the Bawlf report could help solve the housing problem if it was implemented in a spirit of co-operation.

"There will be no enthusiasm, however, if the government uses threats."

Campbell said he has not altered his opposition to the threats in the Bawlf report but is optimistic the legislation would omit this feature.

"This can work if we all co-operate."

Reserve Asked For Islets Off Oak Bay

Ecological reserves are part of a world system of reserves dedicated to saving examples of the environment for scientific research and education.

The three main islets involved are Jemmy Jones off Cadboro Bay, Great Chain Island, midway between Oak Bay Marina and Discovery Island, and Alpha Island on the east side of Chatham Island.

The proposal, which includes the sea floor to a depth of five fathoms, was submitted by ERC director Bristol Foster, chairman of the meeting, and Jim Pojar, a biologist with the committee.

Pojar told the resource experts that Great Chain Island and the adjacent islets support the largest sea bird population in the Gulf of Georgia.

Gulls, cormorants, oystercatchers and igeon guillemots nest there, and the floor of the sea, he said, is rich in sea life, such as shell-bearing marine invertebrates and marine plants.

Alpha Island off Chatham, he added, has interesting flora as no sheep graze there.

Pojar also submitted proposals to preserve two river estuaries on the west coast of Vancouver Island because of their importance as feeding grounds for fish, shell fish, sea and shore birds and elk herds.

"It is one of the most interesting estuaries on the Island," he said. "It includes a tidal marsh and a flood plain — the feeding ground of a herd of elk during the winter months.

Pacific oysters, now an endangered species, are also found there.

The species is pretty scarce," he said. "We should do something to protect them before they are exterminated."

Pojar said the ecological reserve would be about 500 acres, involving mostly marsh and flood lands.

The other estuary is at the head of Tahsish Inlet which forms part of Kyuquot Sound.

"This is the winter feeding grounds of one of the largest elk herds on the island," Pojar said. "Like Klaskish, it is an undisturbed estuary and its watershed largely unlogged."

He also noted both estuaries are important resting places of thousands of migratory birds.

More than 25 other sites for ecological status have yet to be submitted to the committee.

One of these is the Chemainus River estuary which local levels of government and ratepayer groups want protected from industrial or residential developments.

The request for ecological status for the Chemainus River estuary is based on a report published last January by the federal department of environment.

All proposals submitted to the committee are referred to cabinet for approval.

HITSCHMANOVA
. . . meeting Monday

USC Campaigner In Town Friday

She wears almost a military type uniform and in her case, it's fitting.

The neat, khaki outfit with its collar and tie and peaked cap is appropriate for a woman who has soldiered her way around the world fighting to help the underprivileged and poor.

Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, founder and mainspring of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada, donned the uniform more than 30 years ago in what was then a crusade on behalf of children who survived wartime concentration camps.

Her battle has been waged ever since across Europe, into Korea, Hong Kong, Vietnam, Africa, Bangladesh, Indonesia and Nepal.

Through annual fund-raising and special gifts the USC today supports 14 programs in 12 nations, mostly inspected personally by this diminutive "soldier" once a year.

Dr. Lotta — as she has become known — arrives in Victoria Friday in advance of her pre-Christmas campaign, as she has done for more than 20 years.

She will make personal contracts and address a public meeting Monday at 8 p.m. at the Empress Hotel on the subject, Tomorrow Could be Kind, supported with a slide presentation.

Among those who have praised her work is Prime Minister Trudeau.

"In the 31 years since Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova organized the USC, a great deal has been accomplished to alleviate suffering and improve the quality of life around the world," he said.

"Under Dr. Hitschmanova's guidance, the USC continues to succeed in and to expand its invaluable programs . . . I am pleased to offer you my wholehearted support."

Ask the Times

Q. Over the years I have been trying to find either a breakfast or dinner set with a colored maple leaf pattern but have been unable to find one. Where can one buy either a dinner or breakfast set with colored maple leaf pattern. H.H.

A. A check with Victoria's china stores failed to come up with a solution to your problem. The only set available is at Henry Birks and Sons Ltd., 706 Yates. They have a Bavarian coffee set — coffee pot, cream and sugar, six cups and saucers, and six plates. It sells at $50 but the maple leaves are not brightly colored. The only other maple leaf design is Royal Albert's silver maple ware. This can be ordered as open stock from Elsea's Gift Store, 637 Fort.

Logging Show At Sooke For Top Cops

It will be a case of cops and loggers.

The Capital Region Board voted a grant of $4,000 Wednesday to sponsor a "mini-Sooke Day" next August when the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police holds its annual conference in Victoria.

City police chief Jack Gregory is the association's immediate past president. There will be 400 to 450 police chiefs on hand Aug. 22 to 27.

The "mini-Sooke Day" will consist of a display of logging sports and activities as well as a salmon barbecue.

Aerial Truck Arriving On Friday

Saanich's new aerial truck with its 100-foot ladder will be delivered Friday.

Chief Harold Gains said today the equipment, which cost $140,000, will enable Saanich firefighters to deal with fires in eight-storey buildings.

The highest buildings in the municipality now are five-storeys.

An electronic monitor at the end of the ladder can release water at the rate of 1,500 gallons a minute, Gains said, and will be invaluable in reaching areas too hazardous for firefighters.

The aerial, mounted on an International Harvester truck, was built by the Montreal company of Pierre Thibault.

Driven from Montreal, it arrived in Vancouver on Friday.

Gains said International Harvester's service depot there has been doing warranty work on the truck since then and "ironing out any bugs that showed up during the 4,000 miles (between Montreal and Vancouver)."

This will be the second such piece of equipment in the Greater Victoria area, the first being purchased by the city of Victoria.

After the Snooze, a Five-Year Nightmare

Earl Sutherland, who had an hour's snooze in a bank before robbing it, was sentenced Wednesday in provincial court to five years in prison.

A last-minute application to change his guilty plea to not guilty was rejected by Judge Blake Allan.

The 52-year-old Sutherland was observed sleeping in the lounge area of the Bank of Commerce on Government on Oct. 20.

After about an hour, he got up, walked to a teller handed her a shopping bag and asked for money. He got more than $1,900.

Sutherland then went on a spending spree in Port Angeles and was arrested several days after his return. He had spent most of the money.

Sutherland originally pleaded guilty but when he was to be sentenced Tuesday, lawyer Gordon Macdonald told court he had been retained by the accused with instruction to apply for a change of plea.

He told court Sutherland was an alcoholic and was under the influence of alcohol when he pleaded guilty. Sutherland didn't really appreciate the seriousness of the charge, Macdonald said.

He said that, according to the pre-sentence report, Sutherland was drinking three quarts of hard liquor a day.

That certainly was a phenomenal quantity, the judge agreed with Macdonald, adding he would have to take that allegation with a grain of salt.

"Most people couldn't drink three quarts of milk a day," he said.

In refusing to allow the change of plea, Judge Allan said he was satisfied he had done everything to inform the accused of the severity of the charge at the time he pleaded guilty.

He said he had to consider the cost to the public of a trial and under the circumstances, that cost would be unjustified.

Macdonald asked the judge to consider a two-year sentence with alcohol counselling, but Allan said the charge was too serious for such a light sentence.

He also stressed that Sutherland had a lengthy record — 64 previous convictions for a variety of offences.

Mark One Up for the Bicycling Fraternity

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

There is no legal duty for a cyclist to give his name and address to a policeman, a Victoria county court judge ruled in Victoria Wednesday.

As a result, said Judge Peter Millward, there can be no obstruction of a police officer when a cyclist refuses this information.

He directed a jury to return a verdict of not guilty for Richard Harvey Moore, 48, accused of obstructing a policeman April 19.

The crown contended that Moore refused to pull over and give his name and address to a policeman after cycling through a red light, and then tried to flee. This, it was argued, constituted obstruction.

Millward, however, ruled in favor of a no-evidence motion presented by defence counsel Doug Christie and called the jury in to hear his reasons.

He said that Section 118 of the Criminal Code, regarding public assistance to a policeman, didn't apply because there was no evidence Moore was given notice to assist the policeman in keeping the peace.

There was notice that Moore had violated the Motor Vehicle Act by going through a red light, but Christie argued a bicycle is not a motor vehicle within the terms of the Motor Vehicle Act.

A "motor vehicle" was defined as a "vehicle" which was defined as "a device in, upon, or by which a person or thing is or may be transported or drawn upon a highway, except a device designed to be moved by human power or used exclusively upon stationary rails or tracks."

Another section states that it is an offence for a person "driving or operating or in charge of a motor vehicle" to refuse to stop when requested by police or give a name and address.

While it "seems incredible," Millward said, Moore, while he was a person operating a bicycle, was not a person driving a vehicle under the Motor Vehicle Act.

He said citizens should co-operate with police and provide their name and address when requested, but there was no duty for cyclists to do this "and where there is no duty there's no obstruction."

Crown counsel Roger Cardinal had argued that Section 173 of the Motor Vehicle Act applied. This says that "in addition to the duties imposed by this section, a person operating a cycle upon a highway has the same rights and duties as a driver of a vehicle."

An appeal by the crown is under consideration, it was learned later.

Ottawa to Gear Defence Against 'Old Man Ron'

TORONTO (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders plan to take advantage of Saskatchewan quarterback Ron Lancaster's age in the Grey Cup game Sunday.

Bob O'Billovich, Ottawa's defensive backfield coach, said in an interview this week the Riders want to "get a strong rush going on Ronnie because that will make him keep more backs in to block."

"He doesn't like to run around any more."

Lancaster, 37, is a "great quarterback from the viewpoint of being able to mix the pass and run," O'Billovich added. "We have to try to take away the established routine of his game and make him try different things."

Keeping extra backs in to block reduces the number of potential receivers and the effectiveness of the Rughriders' offence, O'Billovich says.

The Riders advanced to the Grey Cup by beating Hamilton Tiger-Cats 17-15 in the Eastern Football Conference final last Sunday and one of the key ingredients in the win was the destruction of the Ticats' running game.

O'Billovich said Saskatchewan will be easier to defend against along the geound because "they don't have anyone like Jimmy Edwards," the Hamilton running back.

Tom Campana is the only Saskatchewan player who is comparable to Edwards, O'Billovich said. "He is the key guy to the Roughies. Ronnie likes to throw to him in the seams of the pass defence and also go to him for running."

The Ottawa defensive line hopes to put pressure on Lancaster, and that will be helped by tackle Mike Raines, who played his first game in weeks in the win over Hamilton.

"People don't realize that we've only had Rines for part of the season," O'Billovich said. "When we have those four in there, it's a pretty solid line."

He was referring to Raines, tackle Rudy Sims and ends Jim Piaskoski and Mike Fanucci.

Hamilton burned the Ottawa secondary with two touchdown passes from Jimmy Jones to Terry Evanshen. O'Billovich thinks Lancaster may have the same thing in mind, but said Ottawa will be ready this time.

Saskatchewan beat Ottawa 29-16 earlier this season, but O'Billovich says the score isn't indicative of how the game was played.

"It wan't an easy 29 points for Saskatchewan," he said. "They threw well in the game but they didn't get very far running.

"Also, we had a touchdown pass and a punt return called back against us when they had a 13-9 lead."

Mini-Tour in Northwest?

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

PHOENIX — Pacific Northwest golfers appear to be parading talent in front of executives who are contemplating the introduction of a National Golfers' of America tournament to British Columbia, Idaho, Washington and Oregon in the not-too-distant future.

Tournament director Tim Bateman said Wednesday that if the NGA expands its mini-tour program, the Northwest "most definitely" would be considered.

Bateman, 28, and Dan Powers, a "couple of desert kids," fostered the four-a-month tournament series concept and formed the NGA after graduating from college three years ago.

"The Northwest has always been one of our target areas," Bateman declared. "Cities like Vancouver, Portland, Seattle, and even your Victoria, have the populations and would be ideal for another series."

The November series in Arizona offers $300,000 in prize money to young professionals who are, in effect, being groomed to play on the PGA circuit.

Golfers like Fred Haney and Craig Griswold of Oregon, Kelowna's Dave Barr, Cec Ferguson of Victoria, and others support Bateman's belief that there are plenty of good golfers around to support an NGA series in the Northwest.

Haney, from Oloha, Oregon, held the halfway lead in this week's tourney at Pima Country Club. He came in with a 66 Wednesday to go with an opening-round 67 for a nine-under-par total of 133.

Haney was one stroke in front of Griswold, 64-70—134; Gary Jacobson of Tempe, Ariz., 66-68; and Bob Brow of Coronado, Calif., 66-68.

Griswold is a former all-American from Oregon who was the No. 1 player on a college team that included Vancouver's Doug Roxburgh, a two-time Canadian Amateur champion.

Six golfers were in a tie for fifth place at 136.

Ferguson scored a par 71 Wednesday after a first-day 68, for a three-under 139, five shots behind the leader going into today's third round.

Three other B.C. golfers were right behind Fergy. They are Muncie Booth of Vancouver, 69-71-140; Bob Cox of Vancouver, 71-70—141, and Barr, 72-70—142.

"I played poorly yesterday and scored well. Today I played well and scored poorly," said Ferguson who, like most everybody, missed numerous birdie chances because of poor putting conditions.

Competition was halted for a practice round Wednesday in the annual Canadian Professional Golfers' Association pro-amateur classic at the Camel Back course.

Third of the four rounds was being played today with a team headed by Cowichan professional Bill Wakeham starting the day with a slender lead.

PLAYERS AGENT PROBED

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says in a copyright story that the National Hockey League is investigating the financial operations of Richard Sorkin Ltd., the New York-based representative of numerous NHL players.

The newspaper says Frank Torpey, the NHL's director of security, confirmed that he had met with Sorkin to discuss financial problems involving players who Torpey says claim they are owed "substantial amount of money, which were entrusted to Mr. Sorkin."

The newspaper quotes Toronto lawyer Alan Eagleson as saying that Lanny McDonald of Toronto Maple Leafs, a former Sorkin client now represented by Eagleson, is owed $40,000.

The newspaper also says Gord Laxton, goalkeeper for Pittsburgh Penguins, is owed $30,000 by Sorkin and that Bob Hess of St. Louis Blues is owed more than $50,000 by Sorkin and has failed in six months in repeated attempts to secure the money.

Sorkin refused comment on the charges, the newspaper says. "I suggest you be very careful," the newspaper quotes Sorkin as saying.

"I'm being very candid. If anything about this is written at all you will be entangled in a huge lawsuit."

In a recent meeting with Sorkin, Torpey says the agent told him he had cash difficulties.

"He said he had investments that couldn't be disposed of," Torpey said Sorkin told him. "But I'm concerned for my players."

Torpey said that his officials are staying in touch with the situation but that from a legal standpoint, the NHL is in no position to act.

Canucks Squeak Tie at Buffalo

Vancouver got a tip-in goal from Mike Walton with 46 seconds left in their game at Buffalo and salvaged a 4-4 tie with the Sabres, snapping a seven-game National Hockey League losing streak in the process.

But Maloney was worried earlier.

"In the first period, we gave the puck away just four times and allowed them only nine shots," he said. "I commended my guys for that after the first period and it must have gone to their heads in the second period we gave away the puck 17 times and they got 16 shots."

In other games, Atlanta Flames beat Washington Capitals 6-2, Montreal Canadiens whipped Cleveland Barons 8-1, Detroit Red Wings edged Toronto Maple Leafs 4-3, Philadelphia Flyers tied New York Rangers 2-2, Boston Bruins blanked Pittsburgh Penguins 4-0, St. Louis Blues downed Minnesota North Stars 4-2 and Chicago Black Hawks nipped Los Angeles Kings 5-4.

Rick Blight scored two and Gary Monahan had the other goal for Vancouver. Rick Martin had three goals for Buffalo and a season total of 10, while Rene Robert had one.

Guy Lafleur scored two goals and assisted on a pair by Steve Shutt as Montreal crushed the Barons at Cleveland. Yvon Lambert, Murray Wilson, Jacques Lemaire and Doug Jarvis contributed a goal each to the Canadiens offence. Cleveland's Bob Murdoch spoiled netminder Ken Dryden's shutout bid.

Gordie Howe, Sid Abel and Ted Lindsay, the Wings' Production Line of the 1950s, watched the game and a pregame ceremony, in which former coaches Tommy Ivan and Jimmy Skinner and one-time club president Marguerite Norris Riker were inducted into the team's hall of fame.

Gary Dornhoefer's second goal of the game and seventh of the year, on a breakaway at 12:48 of the final period, gave the Flyers their tie with the Ranugers at Philadelphia. New York led 2-0 on goals by Rod Gilbert and Ron Greschner.

Lethbridge Broncos blasted Regina Pats 12-1 and Brandon Wheat Kings handled Winnipeg Monarchs 8-1 in two Western Canada Hockey League games Wednesday night.

In Lethbridge, the Broncos took over the lead in the Central Division while Wheat Kings increased their lead at home in the Eastern Division over Saskatoon Blades who were idle Wednesday.

Broncos walked away with the game after taking a 2-0 first period lead. They led 7-0 after two and outscored the visitors 5-1 in the third.

Wheat Kings fired in four goals in less than four minutes of the third period to record their win.

Winnipeg coach Gerry Brisson became incensed after the Wheat Kings moved into a 6-1 lead in the third. He benched all of his defencemen and finished the game with forwards, a move that cost him two more goals.

Surge by Juniors Wrecks Trilec

Trilec wasn't able to stand early prosperity Wednesday night and fumbled an opportunity to climb into a three-way deadlock for second place in the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League.

After grabbing a 32-23 lead in the opening half at Oak Bay Junior High School, Trilec was blasted in a shooting barrage unleashed early in the second session by Victoria Junior Men.

Darrell Johnston, the game's top scorer with 16 points, got Trilec within one point with four seconds remaining, but the Juniors wrapped up their second victory of the campaign when Bob Vanderford dropped two foul shots at the final buzzer.

ERVING DRAWS A CROWD FORD GETS THE CHEERS

By The Associated Press

Julius Erving drew another capacity crowd as he played in Detroit for the first time in the National Basketball Association, but it was Chris Ford who sent the fans home buzzing over his play.

Erving, the star attraction of Philadelphia '76ers, was a crowd-pleaser. But it was Ford's play that led Detroit Pistons to a 118-117 victory over the '76ers on Wednesday night before a crowd of 11,111.

The triumph was Detroit's ninth in the last 10 games and snapped a three-game Philadelphia winning streak.

Ford scored 22 points, had six steals and may have saved the victory by diving into the seats and stopping an errant pass from going out of bounds in the closing seconds.

Sally Little Leads Far-East Open

MANILA (AP) — Sally Little of South Africa fired a two-under-par 70 Thursday for a one-stroke lead in the first round of the Far East Women's Open Invitational LPGA championship.

Vikettes Out to Heal Old Sore

This may come as a surprise to some of the UVic Vikettes, but they have a score to settle with Saskatchewan Huskiettes when they clash Friday and Saturday night in a pair of Canada West University Athletic Association women's basketball games at McKinnon Gym.

The last time coach Mike Gallo's girls lost a game in the regular schedule was March 1, 1975, and the team that beat them was coach Pat Jackson's Huskiettes.

Since then, Vikettes have reeled off 24 consecutive schedule victories, the total not including losses in playoff and exhibition games. They won all 20 schedule games last season and their first four this year to again lead the league.

That 1975 loss came in the last game of the season and knocked Vikettes out of second place. Saskatchewan finished second with the same won-lost record as the Vikettes but got the nod by outscoring UVic in four schedule meetings that year.

Huskiettes are in a three-way tie for fourth place this season with a 1-3 mark, but Gallo isn't counting his points before Vikettes win them.

"They're record really isn't indicative of their ability," he explained. "I'm looking for two tough games."

Gallo has three players coming off the injury list—Maryanne Longmore with a pulled foot tendon, Marg Mainwaring with hyperextension in the left hand and rookie Brenda Smith with a knee problem. Smith won't play Friday but with Saturday while Longmore and Mainwaring will play both nights.

Uvic Vikings, meanwhile, take on Saskatchewan Huskies at McKinnon in a pair of CWUAA men's games Friday and Saturday and need a sweep to get even in the standings. Coach Ken Shields' squad is 1-3 after a pair of tough losses last weekend to Alberta Golden Bears in Edmonton.

Only doubtful starter in the Viking lineup is Al Olsen, who has lost weight and is undergoing tests to determine the cause.

Shields will start Jim Duddridge, Lee Edmondson and Chris Hebb on the forward line this weekend with Robbie Parris and Grant Boland in the back court.

Duddridge counted 47 points and Edmondson 25 last Saturday in UVic's 96-90 loss to Alberta.

"We played well offensively in that game," Shields said, "but we still have a lot of work to do defensively."

Huskies are the only team in the league without a victory. They're last with an 0-4 mark, two points back of fifth-place UVic.

Starting times both nights are 6:30 for the women and 8:30 for the men.

Player Hit By Lightning

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South African golfer Gary Player escaped injury Sunday when he was struck by lightning but unhurt during a tournament at the Zwartkops Golf Club in Pretoria.

"It was the most incredible feeling," Player said. "My umbrella was knocked clean out of my hand and it was as if someone had slapped me on top of my head. It's the most helpless feeling you can imagine."

Racers Stretch Streak to Seven

By The Canadian Press

Indianapolis Racers coach Jacques Demers doesn't take kindly to idle threats from the opposition.

"We don't like being told we're going to get beat," Demers said after his World Hockey Association team defeated Cincinnati Stingers 6-4 Wednesday night.

The Racers, who now have a club-record seven consecutive victories, were upset with remarks by Cincinnati Stingers coach Terry Slater after Cincinnati was shut out 4-0 Tuesday night at Minnesota.

Slater said the Stingers always come back with a big victory after a loss and said his team would "beat Indianapolis when we get back home."

"Tonight we were not at home," Slater said after the loss, the first on home ice in eight games for Cincinnati. "We were in Minnesota still coming home."

In other games Wednesday night, San Diego Mariners beat Edmonton Oilers 4-2 and Calgary Cowboys and Phoenix Roadrunners played to a 3-3 tie.

Slater blamed fatigue for the Stingers' lack of offence against Indianapolis after arriving back from Minneapolis at 3:30 a.m. local time Wednesday.

max low

Well, what do you know — those rough-and-tumble rugby players have come out as the "good guys" for a change.

So often we hear of officials of other sports being vocally critical of the gentlemanly sport of rugger, as it's commonly known in Britain. It's a dangerous, rough sport, they say, and those who indulge are nothing more than a rowdy bunch of boozers.

But now, the man who will run the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton in 1978 has a few kind things to say about rugby.

Of course, rugby isn't either a Commonwealth or Olympic Games sport but it is, says Geoff Dyson, one which has many attributes other sports would do well to emulate.

Dyson, a man who was Britain's first track and field coach, ran Canada's first mass track program for the Canadian Legion, has seen seven Olympic Games, and is now retired in Edmonton where he teaches biomechanics at the University of Alberta and has been appointed director of the 1978 Commonwealth Games, made his remarks at the recent post-Olympic symposium in Montebello, Quebec.

Don Burgess of Victoria, Canada's rugby coaching organizer, was one of 42 national coaches and technical directors of various sports attending the symposium. And he was delighted to hear such nice words spoken about the game he loves.

In his speech to the symposium, Dyson said Canada had run a magnificent Olympic Games but he felt there was too much "razz-a-matazz and show-biz" in the opening ceremonies. And he told all the coaches and technical directors what they already knew — that training facilities in Canada are an absolute disgrace.

Dyson said sports that have made the greatest progress since the Second World War are those where people can compete in relatively small groups, where the sexes meet, where there is considerable age range, where the organization factor is low, where the element of competition is not too strong, and where the activities get people away from work and from conditions of life that are associated with work.

Rugby football meets all of these points, he said.

"In fact, rugby is probably the best sport there is for getting people together and keeping them together," Dyson pointed out.

The message for coaches of all sports should be to look at what it is about other activities that is attracting people to take part, rather than bemoaning the fact that no one is turning up for your sport, he said.

Dyson took a hard swipe at the track and field people.

"Look at the opposition and see what it is that makes people take part. Don't put on your blinkers with your track and field mind. Some of the (track and field) events are just plain bloody dull, as dull as ditch water!"

The social side of track and field is almost negligible, Dyson claimed.

"The athletes come, run, get changed and go home," he said.

"Sports must provide a greater opportunity for their participants to socialize. Rugby football is probably the most civilized sport in the world in this regard. Rugby involves players, wives, children, and former players in its clubhouse activities and provides a complete social forum for all concerned."

So there, you other guys. Better think twice before you say nasty things next time!

"This looks good—'Mailman flavored.'"

Crowd at Top In Junior 'B'

Just about everything is tight and tense in the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League.

Starting this week, for example, four players were deadlocked for first place in the race for individual scoring honors. Six others were within seven points of the leaders.

Today, there's a similar scramble going among the leading teams and three of them are crowded into the top berth.

Fuller Lake Flyers joined the traffic jam Wednesday night at Fuller Lake Arena, pulling even with Esquimalt Legion and Saanich Braves by bouncing Lake Cowichan Baird's Trucking 9-4 before about 250 spectators.

Currently, it appears that those three cubs will battle it out for regular-season laurels since Juan de Fuca, in fourth place, is eight points off the pace.

Laurie Bell fired three goals and Greg Adams added a pair to set the scoring pace for the Flyers, who held period leads of 5-1 and 8-3.

Dale DeBodt, Glen Smith, Al Coe and Steve Johnson counted for the Truckers, who fired 34 shots at Brent Harrow in the Fuller Lake goal.

B.C. Lions Get Rental Subsidy

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League have been granted $250,000 in rental subsidies during the 1976, 1977 and 1978 seasons by the Pacific National Exhibition board of directors.

Directors agreed to the action Wednesday after the rental subsidy program was recommended by the exhibition's finance, labor relations and contract review committee, following several meetings with Lions' officials.

The financially-troubled team, which drew poorly and finished out of the playoffs this season, will receive $100,000 for each of the 1976 and 1977 seasons and $50,000 for 1978.

Directors also agreed to defer payment of $107,159, which the club owes to the PNE for rental of Empire Stadium in 1975.

Early this year, the PNE took a $50,000 debenture from the community-owned club in lieu of other stadium rent owing from 1975.

The motion for the subsidy says that it be granted only on condition that the club can acquire the equivalent amount from other sources.

New Westminster Mayor Muni Evers and Douglas Prest told fellow PNE directors that Lions' officials have shown them agreements from an outside source to provide the matching sum and to assist the Lions in streamlining their operation.

Angels Sign Grich

ANAHEIM (AP) — Infielder Bobby Grich, one of the current crop of baseball's free agents, signed a multi-year contract Wednesday with California Angels, the American League team announced.

Grich, 27, who had played out his option with Baltimore Orioles, became the third free agent to sign with the Angels since the Nov. 4 re-entry baseball draft was held in New York.

"It's a dream come true for me," Grich said. "It was a dream to get to the majors but this is just the dream of dreams. It's the ultimate.

"If anything, one of the most determining factors was when the Angels went out and got Joe Rudi and Don Baylor. When that happened, I said to myself, this is going to be a tough ball club, and here I am."

Terms of the agreement were not announced and Angels president Arthur "Red" Patterson said some details were yet to be worked out.

However, Grich was reported to have agreed to a five-year pact totalling about $1.2 million.

Earlier, the Angels had signed first baseman-outfielder Baylor and outfielder Rudi, who had played out their options with Oakland A's.

Baylor is reported to be receiving $875,000 on a five-year contract and Rudi between $1.5 million and $2 million for the same length of time.

Grich played second base for the Orioles but will be switched to shortstop for the Angels in 1977 with Jerry Remy remaining at second, a team spokesman said.

"I'm confident I can do the job," Grich said. "The last time I played a full season at shortstop was in 1971 for Rochester and I won the Rawlings Silver Glove."

That award went to the top fielding shortstop in the minor leagues.

Grich did play 81 games at shortstop for Baltimore in 1972.

Angels owner Gene Autry announced the signing, which followed his previous statement that he would open the purse strings to bring a winning club to Anaheim.

"Gene must be congratulated on his heavy backing," said general manager Harry Dalton. "He has given us a tremendous ball club."

The Angels were able to select three from the free agent list because three of the players on their 1976 roster were on it—Tim Nordbrook, Billy Smith and Paul Dade.

Grich earned a fourth Golden Glove award as a top-fielding second baseman in the American League during the past season. He hit .266 with the Orioles in 1976 and in seven American League seasons has an average of .262. He was on the all-star team in 1972, 1974 and 1976.

His home-run totals were in double figures each of the past five years with 13 in his latest season and a career high of 19 in 1974.

A resident of nearby Long Beach, Calif., Grich established career records last season with 93 runs scored and 31 doubles. During the past four years he has averaged 87 runs scored and 98 walks per season.

Hull Returns To Jet Lineup On Sunday

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Jets' said Wednesday leftwinger Bobby Hull will play his first World Hockey Association game this season at home Sunday night.

Hull, the league's all-time leading goalscorer, injured his wrist in a pre-season game and has missed the first six weeks of the schedule.

He had hoped to return to the line-up last Sunday but it was decided to wait another week to ensure the wrist was strong enough.

Day for the Home Teams

Visiting soccer clubs, except Barcelona and Feyenoord of the Netherlands drew resounding blanks all over Europe on Wednesday as the first leg matches of the UEFA Cup third-round were played.

Barcelona, with Dutch star Johan Neeskens scoring once between two goals by Manuel Clares, beat Oesters Vaexjoe in Sweden 3-0.

Barcelona's other high-priced Dutch import, Johan Cryuff, dominated play from the moment Clares put his team ahead shortly before half time. Two goals in the first five minutes of the second half sewed up the match.

Feyenoord's 1-0 victory was scored in Barcelona, against Espanol. A first-half own goal by De Felipe gave the Rotterdam team the edge for the second leg to be played on Dec. 8.

Feyenoord, two years ago, and Barcelona, in the days when the trophy was called the European Fairs Cup, are the only former winners chasing a place in the last eight this time.

Spain's third contestant, Athletic Bilbao, was one of the six home clubs to take a lead. They beat Milan of Italy 4-1 although a goal by Italy's Fabio Capello kept the visitors level until the second half. Dani and Carlos scored two each, including a Dani penalty.

In Turin, Juventus evened up the night for Italy, putting three goals past Ukrainian visitor Schachtor Donetzk, in the first 35 minutes. Italy's Robert Bettega and Tardelli, followed by Roberto Boninysegna, were the scorers.

Both West German survivors go home as losers. Schalke 0-4 was beaten in Brussels on a goal by Molenbeek's Alex Lafont four minutes from the end. Cologne will have more to do in the second leg, having lost 3-0 in London to Queen's Park Rangers.

Ireland's Don Givens opened the score for Queen's Park and Dave Webb made it 2-0 three minutes later.

In the second half, England's Stan Bowles completed the scoring. Two Cologne players, Heinz Flohe and Bernd Cullmann, were booked for fouls on Bowles.

PRO CYCLING HIT BY DOPING SCANDAL

PARIS (AFP) — The daily sports newspaper, L'Equipe, has published an article on doping that could lead to a major scandal in the world of professional cycling.

Rachel Dard, a young professional suspended last week for 18 months and fined 5,000 Swiss francs (about $2,000), accuses the French cycling Federation of acting against only the unknown riders and avoiding any disciplinary action against the big-name professionals.

Thevenet and other French professional cyclists, in a direct challenge to the federation's authority, recently threatened to refuse to sign their registrations next year unless the federation stopped "persecuting" riders over doping.

Merchants Slip Deeper in Cellar

Four third-period goals did the trick Wednesday night at Juan de Fuca Arena as Victoria Maple Leafs pushed Juan de Fuca Merchants deeper into the South Island Big Six Hockey League cellar.

Holding a 2-1 lead after two periods, the Leafs cruised to a 6-2 triumph over the Merchants, now seven points behind the Leafs with one win and three ties in 16 starts.

Les Bergman notched two tallies for the Leafs, who got other goals from Kerry Brewster, Al Decker, Doug Neilson and Dave Wilson.

Norwegian Backs S. Africa

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — The climate is good for a return to the Olympics by South Africa, Jan Straubo, Norwegian member of the International Olympic Committee, told a news conference today at the end of a visit here.

"Politics in this country have changed remarkably," he said. "I have seen Piet Koornhof, your minister of sport, and I was very impressed with his thoughts and the way the government has, fortunately, let sportsmen go ahead and do it their way, the way they think. At last, you seem to be following our rules and regulations.

"This trip is not a private matter. I will bring my feeling before the session of the IOC in Prague next June."

South Africa has been barred fom the Olympics because of its racial segregation policies. Most black African countries boycotted the Montreal Games because of the presence there of New Zealand, one of the nations that has maintained sporting contacts with South Africa.

Straubo, a member of the IOC for 10 years, said the IOC wants to remove politics from the Olympic movement and is determined "not to allow this sort of thing to happen again."

Stiffer Penalties For Hooliganism

LONDON (AP) — Increased penalties are planned for soccer hooliganism, the government announced Wednesday.

Prime Minister James Callaghan told Parliament the government will include the stiffer penalties in a new conspiracy bill to combat hooliganism, a growing menace at soccer matches both here and abroad.

The top fine for adult offenders will be $1,650 and young offenders may be fined up to $330. The maximum penalty at present is $660.

Fighting between rival fans, often spilling on to the playing field, and property damage outside sports grounds has become a major headache throughout Britain.

The violence has cost British Rail $1.65 million in damage to railway cars used to transport fans to matches, Callaghan said.

Callaghan, calling on parents to reassume their responsibilities too, said the new bill "should be a real deterrent to the growth of hooliganism."

TOP AWARD PRESENTED TO SINCLARE

Dr. Ross Sinclare of Oak Bay, a driving force for minor football in the Greater Victoria area, has been honored with one of the B.C. Minor Football Conference's top awards.

Sinclare was presented the "Builders' Award" Friday at a banquet in Burnaby. The award is presented annually to an individual who contributes most to football at the minor level.

The banquet is a prelude to the B.C. bantam final to be played Sunday at Minoru Stadium in Richmond.

Another Oak Bay candidate also came into the spotlight. Eve Nicholson, Oak Bay Invaders' nominee, was selected the provincial "Bantam Queen."

Sunny Days Will Fuel His New Home

The federal government will watch Donald Thompson's fuel bills after he moves into his new house at 9191 Ardmore Drive in March.

He is constructing a solar heating unit with the help of a $9,983 grant from the National Research Council. Later, will have to pay back about 10 per cent of the grant.

"I have no idea what my fuel bill will be but it should be quite low," Thompson said today.

"And over a period of time it should look good compared to oil heating if the price of oil keeps rising. The federal government will be monitoring my fuel bills during the year."

Solar heating is free but it requires a back-up system to keep the house warm during cloudy periods because the solar heating system can store up warmth for three days only. After more than three consecutive cloudy days, an electric heating system will automatically come on.

Thompson, of 1455 McTavish, has had no training in solar heating systems but has studied architecture and interior design. He is working on the house with his wife and a carpenter.

The house will look much like other Ardmore houses, except for the solar collecting system over the shingle roof.

The collection system is made up of thermal glass and insulated metal. Water circulates through the colletors and when it is warm it drops into storage reservoirs. Forced air ducts circulate the heat through the house.

Thompson came up with the idea to experiment on solar heating and approached the government for a grant. He wasn't the only person to have the idea, however, as a total of 14 grants totalling $229,000 hsve been announced by the National Research Council for solar heating experiments.

There were only two in British Columbia, the $9,983 grant to Thompson and a $19,830 grant to an Aldergrove man.

Ottawa wants to compare the results of solar energy systems in varying climatic conditions and the total fuel bill will be the centre of attention.

Polish Trawler In Port

Commanded by Capt. Andrzej Slymanski, the 2,500-ton motor trawler Garnela reached Victoria early Wednesday and is due to leave port late on Friday.

She is part of a four-ship Polish fishing fleet working off the West Coast and is owned by the Polish firm Odra Deep Sea Fishing Co., based in the Polish port of Swinoujscie. She carries a complement of 77 men.

In the past Polish ships have entered local waters to land injured or sick seamen but this is the first time the docking was to allow the crew to enjoy some rest and recreation.

The 291-foot vessel will rejoin the rest of the fleet which is expected to leave the area shortly to work the Atlantic fishing grounds.

ELDERLY TO PAY LESS FOR WATER

PORT ALBERNI — Effective Jan. 1, senior citizens who pay water rates will get a 10 per cent discount.

The reduced rates for the over 65s came as council discussed bylaw changes that will allow the city to hike water rates in general by 30 per cent.

The bid to provide a discount to senior water users was sparked by Ald. George McKnight who said he wanted to see them "get some kind of relief from this substantial increase."

Ald. Walter Behn told council the discount plan could affect as many as 500 elderly water users.

Hotel Chain Signed To Run Wilson Inn

Western Hospitality Hotels Ltd. of Vancouver has been signed to manage the Wilson Inn on Blanshard Street, spokesmen for the companies said today.

Western Hospitality already provides management services for the Haida Inn at Campbell River, the Island Hall Resort at Parksville, Beach Garden Resort Hotel at Powell River and the Stockmen's Hotel in Kamloops.

Named to manage the 65-room Wilson Inn is Al Tabor, former manager of the Eaglecrest Golf and Country Club near Qualicum.

Western Hospitality also announced it has signed a management contract with the 100-room Yellowhead Inn of Prince George and Larry Hansen, the assistant manager of Stockmen's will become the manager there.

House Sales Up With Decline In Mortgages

The drop in the mortgage interest rate will produce a shot in the arm for the housing market, Greater Victoria Real Estate Board president John Thomson said today.

The rate is falling to the range of 11 to 11.25 per cent from 11.5 to 11.75 per cent.

"This move will increase the number of Victoria families that can afford to buy homes," Thomson said.

"Each time the mortgage rate falls there is a decrease in the affordability gap."

For example, at 11.75 per cent a $50,000 mortgage has monthly payments of $507.23 and a family must earn about $20,300 per year in order to qualify.

At the new rate of 11.25 per cent, the monthly payment is reduced to $489.88 per month and families earning about $19,600 a year or more qualify.

Thomson said the lower rates will give impetus to a housing market that had been showing a bit more vigor in the past few weeks.

"There is a reduction of the surplus of single family homes in the $55,000 to $75,000 range. There are many good bargains still available there but not quite a many houses on the market as there were six weeks ago."

He said any house or condominium under $55,000 tends to sell fairly quickly but over that yrice there has been resistance, especially in the condominium market.

The market for houses above $100,00 is fairly slow but this is not unusual because there are few purchasers available in that price range.

The new mortgage interest rates will increase the number of available purchasers for houses in the middle price range, where the market had been weak over the summer, Thomson said.

Banks this week reduced their conventional mortgage rate to 11.25 per cent from 11.75 per cent and their National Housing Act rate to 11 per cent from 11.5 per cent. Trust companies are also considering rate reductions.

The Candian Imperial Bank of Commerce was the first to announce a rate reduction and it was quickly followed by similar moves by the Royal Bank and Toronto-Dominion.

The move was in response to a decision by the Bank of Canada to lower its rate to the banks to nine per cent from 9.5 per cent.

Banks responded by reducing their prime rates to major business customers to 9.75 per cent from 10.25 per cent and consumer loan interest rates are also expected to edge downwards.

Normally it takes many weeks before a Bank of Canada rate drop results in changes in the mortgage rate and some trust companies expressed surprise by the quick reaction by the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

"We usually make mortgage rate announcements on a Friday afternoon so I don't expect any action before that time," a trust company spokesman said.

"In fact it may take several weeks but I expect interest rates will come down."

The mortgage interest picture is complicated by the proliferation of short-term mortgages which have lower interest rates.

Lease May Be Dropped

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is trying to get out of its $241,400-a-year lease of Vancouver waterfront land which was cited in the auditor-general's report as an example of wasteful government spending, J. B. Seaborn, a deputy minister of environment, said today.

He told Lloyd Crouse (PC — South Shore) during the Commons fisheries committee meeting that the public works department is negotiating on his department's behalf but no settlement has been made.

The $241,400 lease, set to run until 2045, was on the site intended for an environmental centre, which was scrapped under the federal restraint program.

BODY PART PROFIT: IS IT TAXABLE?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Persons thinking of selling parts of their bodies for posthumous medical use should consider the tax implications of such a transaction, Robert B. Goodwin, a Winnipeg lawyer, said Wednesday in a speech to the Canadian Tax Foundation conference.

Goodwin said in the United States, and to a lesser degree in Canada, people are contracting to sell vital organs such as kidneys and eyes, as the demand for these commodities has increased and the supply of donated items becomes smaller.

He said the U.S. Internal Revenue Service denied a charitable donation on the grounds that a blood donation constituted a personal service, rather than a contribution of property.

Goodwin said a sale of human body parts can take place in one of several ways, differing mainly in the time of delivery and payment.

"If the part was sold for future delivery, but with payment to be made immediately, one would expect the prospective purchaser to discount the value of the part quite significantly, depending on how long he has to wait for it and its condition at delivery, having in mind the life style of the vendor," he said.

A tax court would likely find that money received from the sale of blood or body parts were not income for tax purposes, Goodwin said.

The court would likely treat them much like damage received for personal injuries, he said, because of a very natural disinclination to regard the human body or its byproducts as an appropriate subject for a commercial transaction.

"Unless someone sells his by-products on such a regular basis that he would be found to be in the business, I believe the greater likelihood is that such transactions would be held in respect of capital," he said.

Goodwin said that if body parts are property, then their value will have to be considered not only for income tax purposes, but also under provincial succession duty and gift tax acts.

Job-Finder's Claims Questioned

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ron Stew, job finder for the provincial human resources department, told the Vancouver resources board Wednesday that his Provincial Rehabilitation and Employment Program (PREP) is finding 1,000 jobs a month for welfare recipients.

He said the department's caseload has dropped by 23.5 per cent and it has a surplus of $53 million.

Since August, PREP has placed an average of 1,040 welfare recipients a month in jobs not available through Canada Manpower or other employment agencies, he said.

Murray Leith, a member of the resources board, said it was difficult to believe that 1,000 jobs are being created monthly "out of thin air."

"It seems to me we are talking about more jobs (when Manpower placements are considered) than there are in the total work force," he said.

Ald. Harry Rankin, board chairman, said the PREP program appears to be a matter of swapping jobs around. He said he could not conceive 1,000 jobs a month being available when unemployment is running at 7.5 per cent.

Stew said there wasn't necessarily a relationship between PREP's job finding record and the 23.5 per cent drop in welfare caseloads and the department's surplus.

He said the program has been a success on a province-wide basis but that there are many more jobs to be found in Vancouver by the six PREP job finders employed by the resources board.

Stew suggested that the six be placed under his jurisdiction.

He told the board 32 welfare recipients were dropped from the rolls in Surrey last week because they turned down jobs found by PREP.

In northern B.C., PREP is finding more jobs than are needed for welfare cases and the surplus jobs are referred to Canada Manpower, Stew said.

As the $20,300-a-year PREP co-ordinator, Stew said he considers himself to be "a sales manager who must keep the force activated and motivated."

A former encyclopedia salesman, he was hired by Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm in May after working for five years as a job finder in Surrey's social services department when Vander Zalm was mayor of the municipality.

Stew was invited to appear before the resources board after Vander Zalm said he was disturbed by the board's job-finding record in September and October.

Stew said the board's reception to him at the meeting showed "the lack of positive mental attitude by board members."

Aid Increased

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canada will increase its humanitarian aid to Palestinian refugees by 11 per cent this year, pledging $1.5 million in Canadian funds toward the support of the UN Relief and Works Agency.

B.C. Man Fasting In Jail

VANCOUVER (CP) — A New Westminster man is one of two prisoners in King County jail in Seattle, who have started a fast after being convicted of charges arising from a protest at the Trident nuclear submarine construction site near Bangor, Wash., a spokesman for the Pacific Life Community said Wednesday.

Peter Chapman said James Douglass, 39, and John Williams, 25, of Seattle, have started a 90-day fast as part of a non-co-operation policy with jail authorities.

Douglass, along with seven other members of the Pacific Life Community, was convicted of destroying United States government property and trespassing during a protest last summer.

Bosch Halogens give 100% more light*

We don't want to frighten you. But your life, and the lives of others, could depend on your car's headlights.

And Bosch Halogen headlights give you 100% more light to drive by. Light that floods the road ahead with greater intensity. Light that reaches out further, too.

You get extra time to see, react to and avoid dangers ahead—without blinding drivers coming the other way. You'll find driving at night is less fatiguing, too. Another important safety factor.

Computer designed

Bosch Halogens are computer designed to give even distribution of light as well as throwing it further without blinding. The lens is crystal and a special shield in the bulb also helps reduce glare to oncoming traffic.

The Bosch Halogens in the photo above are on high beam, but even on low beam they throw out more light making it easier to see ahead.

Each Bosch Halogen kit contains all you need for easy installation. Headlights, double-filament halogen bulbs, protective seals, wiring adaptors.

Installation is easy

Just take out your regular headlights and snap in ours. Then spend a few minutes ensuring the lights are aimed correctly. When it's time to replace the bulb, that's all you do. The unit stays in place.

On cars with four headlights, you need replace only the two low beams. Complete installation instructions come with each kit, or ask your dealer to install them for you.

Bosch Halogens are designed to replace standard headlights on virtually all makes and models of both domestic and imported automobiles.

Northland Grudge 'Untrue'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Iona Campagnolo, federal minister responsible for sport and fitness, said in what she thought was a confidential conversation earlier this month that she had heard rumors that a special adviser to Jack Davis, British Columbia transport minister, bore a grudge against Northland Navigation Co. Ltd.

Mrs. Campagnolo's remark was made during an open-line radio show on CFTK radio in Terrace on Nov. 12 when she thought she was off the air. Technical problems caused her remark to be broadcast at the same time as a commercial.

Mrs. Campagnolo, the member for Skeena, said of adviser Glenn Chestnut that she heard he "had been out to get those people" at Northland.

Northland lost much of its freight service and all of its passenger service to B.C. coastal communities when the federal government decided last August to stop all transportation subsidies on the B.C. coast.

Its passenger service was replaced with a launch chartered by the provincial government from Rivtow Straits Ltd. for $1,600 a day, of which the federal government pays $800.

Chestnut denied published reports that he was the man largely responsible for the decision to charter the Rivtow vessel.

"To imply that I was responsible for the decision is just incorrect," he said.

He also denied that he bore any grudge towards Northland.

"That's just all malarkey," said Chestnut, "I could call it a stronger word, but that's all I'll call it . . . it's untrue."

A spokesman for CFTK said a copy of Mrs. Campagnolo's remarks was unavailable because of equipment failure.

Contacted in Ottawa, she said: "I can't remember exactly how I said it, but I said that I had been told that he had some hard feelings for Northland.

"It's not something I would discuss publicly, and not in any public forum, certainly."

Gerald Freisen, secretary of Northland, said there has been a persistent rumour that Chestnut had been carrying a grudge since 1958, when he was an executive assistant to Union Steamships, which then serviced the coast.

The company lost its federal subsidy that year in circumstances similar to those of Northland's. Northland soon after began its coastal servises, and was soon given a federal subsidy.

Devalued $ May Bring Tax Hikes

VERNON (CP) — Property owners face tax increases if the Canadian dollar continues to drop in terms of United States funds, Lumby Mayor Pat Duke told the North Okanagan Regional District Wednesday night.

He said much of the money borrowed on behalf of municipalities by provincial agencies is obtained in the U.S. and has to be repaid in U.S. currency.

The NORD director also said there are strong indications the federal government will devalue the Canadian dollar which has been dropping on the international money markets during the past week.

He said that it is a disgrace that municipalities are forced to borrow in the U.S. when money is available in Canada.

Dick French, another NORD director, said the municipal finance authority—the borrowing arm of B.C. municipalities—got between 85 per cent and 95 per cent in New York last year.

Duke said, "there's no reason we can't get the New York interest rates here" but Canadians are afraid to invest in their own province or country.

20-Year Terms For H.K. Heroin

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three Hong Kong residents convicted on charges involving $6 million worth of heroin were sentenced to up to 20 years in prison Wednesday by County Court Judge John Spencer.

Wai Ting Li was sentenced to 20 years in prison for conspiracy to traffic in heroin and 15 years concurrent for possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking. Wai Fun Fung received 17 years for conspiracy and 12 years concurrent for possession for the purpose of trafficking and Wing Keung Kwan was acquitted of conspiracy and was jailed eight years for possession for trafficking purposes.

The trail began April 26 and lasted about 50 days in court, after a 40-day preliminary hearing.

Judge Spencer set a Canadian legal precedent by ruling that while wiretap conversations could not be admitted, certain evidence obtained on the basis of the conversations could be.

STOW
. . . impact on people

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bill Stow, a former high-ranking civil servant in the provincial finance department before he was demoted "for disclosing British Columbia's budget deficit last December, is leaving the government and said Wednesday that Social Credit fiscal policies have deflated the B.C. economy.

"I don't know whether they realize how their policies have deflated the provincial economy and have had a significant adverse impact on what the growth rate might otherwise have been," Stow said in an interview Wednesday.

"I don't know whether it's through economic ignorance or dogmatism attached to one view of the public finance world."

He said the increases in sales, corporate and income taxes as well as such things as ferry rates to balance the budget have led to less expansion in industry, less disposable income and greater unemployment.

"I think they have a notion that balanced budgets have something to do with politics but I wonder if they realize they also have an impact on people and jobs," Stow said.

If the government wanted to move toward a balanced budget it could have held the line on any increase in the deficit and made moderate moves toward balancing over more than one year.

"So what if you borrow $200 million this year and $200 million next year? What do you lose except a bit of interest?

"When you take $400 million out of the economy (the approximate amount of the deficit, in one fell swoop that's a pretty hefty chunk."

The government measures "all sort of came together in one fiscal year—it's all sort of difficult (for the economy) to digest."

He said the government should realize that a balanced budget is not a neutral economic tool—it has just as much effect on the economy as deficit or surplus financing.

Stow, 45, made headlines just after Social Credit was elected by revealing finance department figures showing a projected deficit of $325 million. He said he was doing it to defend the department aganst the implication of lack of faith when Premier Bill Bennett appointed an accounting firm to examine B.C. finances.

Thge outgoing New Democratic Party government had claimed the deficit would be only $40 million. As it turned out, Stow's estimate was very close to the accountants' report of $541 million when extra items they included were subtracted.

He was demoted from director of financial and economic research to division economist and handed a 10-per-cent cut in his salary, now about $28,000 annually.

He said his resignation is effective Dec. 31 after which he plans to establish his own private fiscal policy institute.

Before joining the B.C. finance department in 1974 Stow was a senior budget advisor in the Ontario govenment and also set up New Brunswick's taxation and fiscal policy division.

GAS SALE LAW URGED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cyril Shelford, Social Credit MLA for Skeena, has asked the British Columbia government to take immediate action to assist independent businessmen in the retail gasoline trade.

Shelford said Wednesday in a telephone interview from Terrace he has written to Transport Minister Jack Davis requesting the government to preserve the ondependent retailer's existence.

Shelford said that existence is threatened by the actions of major oil companies in continuing to introduce self-service stations and to expand their control of the retail market.

He said he will attempt to introduce a bill at the next session of the legislature in January barring major oil companies from participation at the retail level. Similar legislation approved in Maryland now is being challenged in court by the oil companies.

Shelfors said he supports the demand of the independents that prices be equal at the refinery gate and that retail sales be restricted to the independent dealer and controlled by the balance of the free enterprise system.

Shelford has suggested that cabinet inform the major firms to get out of retailing now because legislation would be forthcoming to enforce this position, along with "a one-price system to all retail dealers in all market areas."

He said he told Davis that the government must try to save the 60 per cent of the remaing independents. Excessive building of self-service stations come from the consumers' pocket, said.

1,000 Diseased Cattle Killed

VERNON (CP) — Lloyd Chapman, president of the South Okanagan Cattlemen's Association, said Wednesday that about 1,000 head of cattle have been destroyed as a result of blue tongue disease.

Chapman said he expects the federal testing program will end Dec. 15 and by then nearly 20,000 head of cattle will have been tested for the disease.

Chapman said prices for cattle yet to be tested are about five cents a pound less than for those which have been inspected.

Suite Law 'Racist'

RICHMOND (CP) — The East Indian Defence Committee said Wednesday that a clampdown on illegal suites in this municipality south of Vancouver is a "massive display of racial discrimination" by the municipal government.

Charges have been laid against 215 homeowners in 96 illegal suite cases being heard in provincial court here this month and municipal officials say 90 per cent of those charged are of East Indian origin.

Mayor Gil Blair said council is enforcing a bylaw which prohibits establishment of a suite in a single-family dwelling.

"It's unfortunate but this particular ethnic group does not seem to have much regard for our bylaw," he said.

Vandal Aid Asked

The letter places the majority of the blame on juveniles, although some policemen believe that the worst vandalism is caused by the 18 to 25 group.

BABAR VISITS THE BELFRY

SILVERMAN

The delightful tale of a young elephant's escapades in the world of people and his final return to his elephant friends, will be told to children, Sunday at 2 p.m., in The Belfry's continuing series of programs for the young.

Barbar the Elephant will be read by one of Canada's finest actors, Christopher Newton, artistic director of the Playhouse Theatre Centre in Vancouver.

In 1940 the French composer, Francis Poulenc, wrote several whimsical pieces to accompany the story, creating a joyous musical backdrop for Barbar's many escapades. Performing these at the piano will be Ellen Silverman, former soloist with the American Wind Symphony of New York.

Children's theatre at its best, it will take place at The Belfry, 1291 Gladstone, corner of Fernwood.

Psychologists To Air Views

Psychologists from throughout B.C. and the United States Pacific Northwest will attend the annual meeting of the B.C. Psychological Association which opens Friday at The Empress.

It is the first time the association has held its meeting here, and more than 200 delegates are expected for the two-day session.

Dr. Bill Gaddes, a University of Victoria psychologist said two of the sessions will be open to the public and of special interest to social and community workers.

One is a workshop on coercion theory given by Dr. Gerald Patterson and Dr. John Reid of the Oregon Research Institute. The workshop begins at 1:30 p.m. Friday in the Georgian Lounge and there is a $10 admission fee.

Gaddes said Patterson and Reid will discuss the application of the coercion theory in handling family and delinquency problems as well as agression in children.

The other public event, also in the Georgian Lounge, the Ed Belyea Memorial Address which will be delivered at 1:30 p.m. Saturday by Dr. James G. Kelly, dean of the school of community service and public affairs at the University of Oregon.

A number of closed sessions are planned for association members and include workshops on psychological testing, experimental learning techniques and a symposium on professional training.

SMOKING TO BLAME?

Victoria firemen suspect careless smoking caused a fire that broke out in a mattress in a house at 645 Rothwell early today.

A fire department spokesman said occupants Michael Kelly and his family were awakened by smoke at about 2 a.m. and escaped unhurt.

Vietnam Refugees Slain

BANGKOK (UPI) — Five small boats containing about 100 Vietnamese fleeing their Communist homeland were waylaid off Cambodia and all aboard slaughtered, refugee sources said Wednesday.

A sixth boat, one day's travel behind the other five, found one floating hulk and a number of bodies, all with their throats cut, the sources said.

Although there is no proof, Vietnamese in the sixth boat and the refugee officials believe Khmer Rouge trooops committed the slayings.

Evidence against the Cambodians is circumstantial, officials and the refugees admitted, and it could have been Gulf of Thailand pirates who killed the 100 men, women and children.

The small boats were travelling close to the Cambodian shore, and Malay and Thai pirates in the area have generally given Cambodia a wide berth since the Communist takeover and stories of Khmer Rouge atrocities.

The refugee sources said that several days after the split-up, the sixth boat came upon the wreck and other debris, including bodies and enough other flotsam so the 20 persons were convinced all five boats were sunk and everyone was killed.

The incident reportedly took place early this month.

The sixth boat was just 24 feet long, but managed to make land in southeastern Thailand after a risky voyage and the horror of finding their dead compatriots.

Ground Broken For Mao's Tomb

TOKYO (AP) — A groundbreaking ceremony for the memorial hall to the late Chinese Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung was held at Peking's Tien An Men Square Wednesday with party and state leaders attending, a Peking broadcast reported. Mao's embalmed body will be preserved in a crystal coffin at the hall, the official Hsinhua news agency said.

Que. Arts Trade Fair Is No Ordinary Show

By ROB BULL
Times Quebec Bureau

MONTREAL — One of the great trade fairs of Canada opens next weekend at Place Bonaventure in the hall which holds throughout the year events like the Internatonal Book Fair, the car and boat shows and the annual agriculture exhibition.

But the Salon des Metiers d'Art du Quebec is a trade fair with a difference. The name can be translated to mean the Art trades show and it annually groups hundreds of the province's professional artists and craftsmen.

For many of the fair's participants, the two-week show will provide them with their entire income for the year.

The event has become an open secret for Montrealers looking for Christmas gifts with a difference. But it is also a chance for very special people from across the province to get together and exchange ideas, techniques, products and phone numbers.

The exhibitors, with their friends and relatives, will start early next week putting up display booths and trucking in their goods in the family station wagons and borrowed or rented trailers.

There will be two or three days of furious activity and incredible construction of kiosks, a certain amount of wandering around to see what everybody else is doing this year and a bit of mutual admiration before the fair's official opening Friday and public opening Saturday.

There will be some of the old craft works that Quebec is known for, great colorful quilts from the Gaspe and wood-carvings from St.-Jean-Port-Joli, as well as the sort of things one would expect to find at such an event, the products of potters and weavers.

But where else could you find a Salvador Dali-style egg, clear but filled with clockwork, or toys made by a reformed mortocycle gang from an east-end slum or new musical instruments that produce sounds of a kind not heard before?

In a way, the real exhibition is the crafts-people themselves, like the son of a village blacksmith who started to become a metalworker when there were fewer horses to shoe, the young jewellers who learned their trade in Prague before 1968, the housewife who took up printmaking to pass the time but got involved in the work and is now producing beauty, the advertising man who packed in all the hokum one day and learned how to make good ceramic ware.

The art trades association of Quebec gives a rigorous examination of the work to be presented at the fair and requires from exhibitors a hefty fee for the privilege of selling their wares.

This accounts for the high quality for which the fair is known. As far as the artists are concerned, it is an excellent proposition because they can sell their products directly to the public without a middleman. This, of course, saves the public cash.

But the salon means more than the exchange of goods for money.

"What place still remains for our personal choice in today's style of living?

"People show increasingly their wish to react against a system of depersonalization and degradation. They want to again participate in their lives and they want to find again a material support for their inner life.

"To understand life, one must be confronted with it and to dissertate on the spirit one must know the normal development of that creative part of all of us."

The confrontation Brochard was talking about can happen at the Salon des Metiers d'Art. It is a happy coincidence that it occurs at Christmas.

U.S. 'Food for Peace' Fails to Aid the Poor

WASHINGTON (WP) — Nearly $1 billion worth of food shipped to 23 countries through a U.S. government-aid program since mid-1975 has gone mainly to people with incomes above the poverty level rather than to the hungriest or neediest in those societies.

Authorities say this pattern of distribution in country after country has thwarted the intent of legislation passed by Congress in 1975 to direct a larger share of American food assistance to the hungry.

That law required that three-quarters of the American commodities purchased by the foreign governments with low-interest U.S. food-aid loans go to the poorest counties — those where average yearly incomes are under $300.

Yet, congressional aides said this week, the law did not specifically require that the subsidized food imports be earmarked for the malnourished inside those countries. Therefore, governments abroad have resold much of the food in regular commercial channels, or distributed it through state-operated shops that serve mainly civil servants, soldiers or other more fortunate parts of the populations, the Capitol Hill aides said.

"This is simply a soft loan window. It provides resources for assisting other government. It's not food aid," said a Senate aide knowledgeable about the program's operations.

Under the 22-year-old Public Law 480 program, nicknamed "Food for Peace," the U.S. government has been giving away about $350 million worth of free food a year to dozens of countries. For the most part, that food goes directly to hungry people under the auspices of the United Nations and relief agencies.

In some countries, such as Tanzania, the food appears to have been distributed equitably, Senate aides have reported. In Turkey, Brazil and Columbia, which received the food aid in the 1960s, funds from the local sale of the commodities have been invested in farm improvements.

But a growing number of reports and documents point to less desirable effects.

Several recipients, such as Haiti, South Korea and Chile, are governed by repressive dictatorships. There the subsidized food serves important fiscal and political purposes.

In most cases the imports are resold by the governments to finance state budgets, which may or may not emphasize agricultural development.

General Accounting Office reports say U.S. controls on the receiving governments' use of the food-sale proceeds are lax.

Authorities said this week that the sale of subsidized food in major cities and towns serves the purpose of placating politically active segments of populations, such as students and soldiers.

The political consequences of stopping food imports were felt in Chile in 1971 and 1972, when the government of the late President Salvadore Allende ran out of foreign exchange and was unable to get foreign food-aid credits. Food prices soared, and middle-class hostility.

Purge of Chinese Radicals 'Historic Victory,' Says Hua

HONG KONG (UPI) — Hua Kuo-feng, in his first public speech since becoming chairman of the Chinese Communist party, said Wednesday the purge of radicals from the party leadership was "a great, historic victory."

But the 56-year-old successor to Mao Tse-tung also told the Chinese people that "arduous tasks are still before us."

Hua spoke at a ceremony held in Peking's sprawling Tien an Men (Gate of Heavenly Peace Square for the laying of the cornerstone of a memorial hall for Mao.

Peking radio said 8,000 persons attended the ceremony, held shortly before sundown at the work site for the "Chairman Mao Memorial Hall," where the preserved body of the late chairman will lie in a crystal coffin.

"The people for generations to come will be able to pay their respects here to chairman Mao's remains," Hua said, paying tribute to the man who founded the People's Republic of China in 1949 after a long and bloody revolution.

Hua denounced Mao's widow, Chiang Ching, and three of her radical associates by name in his 600-word speech.

Madame Mao and the three Chang Chun-chao, Wang Hung-wen and Yao Wenyuan were purged in early October after an attempt to oust Hua and seize power, according to official reports from Peking.

At the same time the radicals were arrested and purged, Hua was appointed party chairman.

A Peking radio report on the ceremony accused Madame Mao and her associates or "underhand manouvres to criminally interfere with and sabotrage the preservation of Chairman Mao's remains."

Hua did not make these accusations, but he said the party had "won a great, historic victory in smashing the plot of the anti-party "gang of four . . . to usurp party and state power."

Model Takes Air Photos

LONDON (CP) — Even in an age when satellites orbit the earth and cameras have photographed the moon, there still is a role for aerial photography performed closer to the ground.

But not necessarily performed by manned aircraft.

In Devon, in southwest England, Jeff Hoer, an electronics engineer working for the Southwest Water Authority, has put his hobby of building radio-controlled model planes to practical use. Recently, when aerial photography was needed to chart the course of effluent from a sewage plant into the estuary of the River Axe, he was called upon to supply the model plane for the job.

Cost was one of the reasons he got the job. The cost of using a model was about £5 ($7.90) an hour compared with £160 for a full-size helicopter with pilot.

It was necessary to catch high tide in the estuary and insert a special dye in the sewage outlet that would show the course of the polluting matter on film.

The model, the Mark I, built and financed by Hoer, has a wingspan of 8½ feet and a lifting capacity of about eight pounds.

"I designed it with a high-lift wing section and the engine on top to keep the exhaust away from the camera, which was mounted in a removable nose," he said.

The fuselage was built of balsa wood — the traditional material for model aircraft — the camera-carrying nosebox was of plywood and the wing of extended polystyrene covered with balsa.

A five-function radio-control unit enabled Hoer to steer the plane with its rudder and ailerons and to control its height with the elevator and its engine speed with the throttle. It also operated the 35-mm. camera with its 24 shots on one winding.

The photographs were successful and Hoer is waiting for approval from water-authority directors to start on a Mark II version.

Hoer said an ideal use for model aircraft would be mapping of potential reservoir sites.

WORKERS GET BONUS IF THEY DON'T SMOKE

SPOKANE (AP) — It pays not to smoke at one medical products company.

"We have offered to make a small payment of $40 a year to those who don't smoke on the premises," said Dorothy Norton, treasurer of Northwest Medical Products.

About half of the company's 25 employes here and at two satellite facilities in Idaho have chosen to participate, she said.

Most of the takers were already non-smokers, but several employees have been attempting to give up smoking since the bonus plan became effective Oct. 1, Mrs. Norton said.

The program was started to improve the working environment and reduce janitorial chores, she said, but another factor is that "we do seem to have more absenteeism with those who smoke."

Studies show that non-smokers generally have higher productivity than smokers, Mrs. Morton said.

A spokesman for the Eastern region of the Washington Lung Association said the program was the first of its type that the association had heard of.

The company sells welding supplies and gasses and medical equipment.

He Makes Money by Making Money

ROME (Reuter) — While the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) strives to answer criticism of being too bureaucratic, there is at least one man swimming successfully against the rising tide of paperwork and committees.

Raymond Lloyd, a 42-year-old Englishman, sits in a paperstrewn office in a corner of the vast FAO headquarters building, quietly making money.

In eight years he had made a cool $1 million. He pays his own salary, plus those of his 13 assistants, all overheads and administrative costs and funds his own Third World aid programs with what is left over.

His idea was a simple one, make money to make money. He persuades national monetary authorities to issue new coins with an FAO slogan on the back, buys a limited quantity at face value and sells them to collectors at a profit.

Look at the back of an Indian 20-rupee coin minted in 1973 and you will see the words "Grow more food." On the 50-rupee coin is written "Planned families: food for all."

Of the estimated 4,000 billion coins circulating around the world, about one in 100 carries a similar slogan. Thanks to Lloyd's efforts, there are enough FAO-sponsored coins to enable every man, woman and child in the world to have one in his pocket.

But making a profit is not the principal aim of the venture.

"The idea is to spread the message," said Lloyd. "I am not promoting FAO as an institution but the theme of world hunger. There is no more important problem in the world.

"Most of our coins are issued by Third World countries but the Vatican was one of the earliest states to mint special coins with a food theme and I am hoping to conclude an agreement soon with the Irish Republic.

"People don't realize how much money can be made by minting coins. The Germans, for example, made $250 million from their Olympic issue."

So far this year, the FAO money program has arranged the minting of coins with a face value totalling some $10 million.

Lloyd said people take more notice of what is written on their coins than might be expected.

"Children especially, when they are taught that a coin is something valuable, look at it and read what is written on it very carefully."

He travels tirelessly, having just returned from a 30-country swing through southern Africa and Asia, persuading treasury and mint officials to accept his ideas for their new coins. It's not an easy job, and he calculates an average of 100 letters are needed to arrange the introduction of each new coin.

Some governments object that if they allow the FAO to "advertise" they will have opened the floodgates to dozens of similar requests. But Lloyd replies that he is trying to spread a message more food—not advertise an institution.

Lloyd is fiercely proud of his independence from the rest of the FAO and emphasizes that his money program is entirely self-financing.

When a country brings out a new issue with one of his designs on the back, he buys up a quantity of coins at face value, providing the issuing country with an immediate profit of about 20 per cent over the actual minting cost.

He arranges them in sets and sells them to collectors at prices ranging from about $14 for a single panel to $187 for a 12-page album.

Lama's Brother Night Custodian

SCOTCH PLAINS, N.J. (AP) — His brother was a god-king, but Lobsang Samden now is night custodian at the high school.

"Whenever we have games, the night custodian has to make preparations, clean up after and lock the door," he said. "Of course, I clean up after classes, too. I work from 3 to 11 p.m."

Samden is the brother of the Dalai Lama, former ruler of Tibet and still spiritual leader of several million Buddhists.

Sam, as he is known, is 45 and lives with his wife and two children in a suburban home.

He has been a monk, an official in Tibet's government, housekeeper at his brother's palace in Lhasa, a social worker in India, envoy to the United Nations Refugee Commission in Geneva and proprietor of a handicrafts store in Manhattan.

He also had dinner with Nikita Khrushchev and Mao Tsetung, together, in Peking 22 years ago.

"Someday, I hope to write a book," he said.

The odyssey of the family which, like all Tibetan families, has no surname, began in "a very small village, Taktses, about 1,000 miles from Lhasa."

"My parents were farmers — horses, sheep, cows, pigs, chickens," Sam said. "Just a simple, small family. Not rich. My father was a horse trader."

In 1933, the 13th Dalai Lama died, a regent was named and a two-year search began for the 14th Dalai Lama. The search ended at the farm home of five-year-old Sam and his two-year-old brother, Tenzingyatso.

A delegation of monks and government officials searching for a boy born at the time the Dalai Lama died noticed Sam's brother, one of four boys considered to have Dalai Lama potential.

"The regent took a trip south of Lhasa to a holy lake and prayed and meditated. A vision appeared. The lake showed our home area and a Tibetan letter.

"He wrote a letter to the search group. They reported they had found a very unusual boy—my brother. He had been wearing rosary beads just like those of the 13th Dalai Lama."

Sam displayed his own rosary, around his neck under the brown and tan custodian's uniform.

"I was seven when he became Dalai Lama. I didn't care. He's my brother and we played every day. But everyone paid so much attention to him, I came to realize he was something special."

In Lhasa, Sam was in a monastery for 13 years. He left at 20 to become government director of monastery affairs.

The Chinese invaded Tibet in 1951, overrunning the Dalai Lama's army. A coalition government was established, but by 1958 "things became rough," Sam said. His brother, family and about 130,000 Tibetans fled to India in 1959.

Sam became a social worker with the refugees in India. The Dalai Lama sent him to Geneva, where he helped Tibetans emigrate.

He and his Tibetan wife, whom he married in India in 1962, emigrated to New York. He opened a handicrafts store and they lived with friends. "But New York got to be too much, too fast and too big for me," he said.

He met a real estate agent and within a week bought a house here.

In May, 1974, Lobsang Samden became night custodian for the Scotch Plains-Fanwood board of education and last February he filed for U.S. citizenship.

"There are many different ways of life," he said.

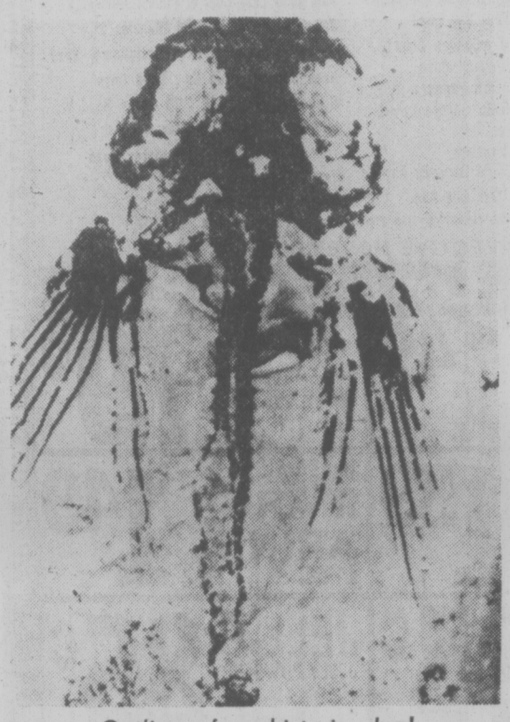
Montana Ranch Holds Remains Of 'Golden Age of Sharks'

New York Times

NEW YORK — In the rocky ravines of a vast cattle ranch in the middle of Montana, 6,000 feet above sea level, an Adelphi University zoologist has found fossil evidence of what appears to have been a "golden age of sharks" that flourished in a now-extinct sea and perhaps around the world more than 320 million years ago.



Outline of prehistoric shark

In that remote era, when giant dragonflies buzzed through damp fern forests and squat amphibians were beginning the vertebrate transition to land, there were sharks of every size and shape occupying dozens of ecological niches.

There were "unicorn sharks" with spikes growing out of the tops of their heads, sharks shaped like flounders, sharks with enlarged fins that enabled them to leap out of the water and glide, sharks with crablike claws on their snouts and tiny sharks only 1¼ inches long.

One of the most extraordinary sharks discovered in Bear Gulch, as the ravines are known, is a four-foot-long model with a dorsal fin hinged like the rudder on the tail of an airplane. In modern sharks the dorsal fin, the big one on the back, is almost totally rigid.

By swinging the movable aft portion of the dorsal fin, one of these extinct sharks could have turned on a dime and easily outmanoeuvered today's mighty predators, in the opinion of Dr. Richard Lund, the Adelphi researcher who is studying the sharks.

For several weeks during each of the last eight summers, Lund has camped with a crew of students in Bear Gulch, breaking out slabs of the sharply layered soft limestone and splitting them to look for skeletons embedded inside.

Lund said that every second or third slab contained a skeleton and that the work thus far had yielded 64 species of shark, many previously unknown. Because of the large number of preserved skeletons, Lund believes there was rapid sedimentation in the ancient sea, quickly burying dead fish before they could be broken up. Some of the sharks are so well preserved that the remains of shrimp can be found in their stomachs.

Bear Gulch lies in the midst of what was once a shallow, warm sea that stretched across western North America for 600 miles during the period in geologic time known as the Mississippian, which lasted from 360 million to 320 million years ago. This was a time within the larger period known as the Carboniferous.

"In their eons of diversification, sharks have been everything from slow, harmless cruisers to rapacious carnivores," Lund said in his laboratory on the Adelphi campus in Garden City, N.Y., before flying to Boulder, Colo., to describe his findings before the Society of Vertebrate Paleontology. "Their experimentations have been very successful. They have done anything any fish can do."

From the fossils it appears that sharks, which have skeletons of cartilage rather than bone, were the first form of fish to evolve adaptations to a wide variety of life-styles. Millions of years later, as the more advanced bony fish evolved, they adapted to the same variety of ecological niches and, competing successfully with the sharks, drove most of them to extinction.

Zoologist Richard Lund

Before the rise of the bony fishes, however, half of all the known species of fish were varieties of shark.

In addition to yielding sharks, Bear Gulch has yielded shrimps, worms and many other as yet unidentified forms of animals. In many cases the sediments preserved not just skeletons and other hard parts but the outlines of the soft parts of bodies such as gill filaments. In many of the fish, the scales were preserved in their original patterns over the skin.

Among the bony fishes found at Bear Gulch are five different kinds of coelacanth, the 450 million-year-old species of fish thought to have been extinct until a living specimen was captured and identified in 1938.

Much of Lund's work at Bear Gulch has been supported by the National Science Foundation and carried out in co-operation with one of the few other experts on fish paleontology, Dr. William Melton of the University of Montana. When asked how many fish paleontologists there were, Lund thought a moment and replied, "four."

BILLY CARTER RUNS FOR PLAINS MAYOR

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — President-elect Jimmy Carter's brother, Billy, will seek the highest elected office in his home town Dec. 6.

Bill Carter will run for mayor against incumbent mayor A. L. Blanton — the same man who defeated him by six votes two years ago.

Carter said he wants to preserve Plains' small-town atmosphere, noting that commercial interests are threatening the tiny town since his brother won the presidency.

Loan to Carter Called Normal

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — A spokesman for President-elect Jimmy Carter describes as "normal business practice" $4.7 million in loans to Carter's peanut business by a bank whose president is slated for a cabinet-level nomination.

Spokesman Rex Granum discussed the loans Wednesday, nearly six hours after announcing that Thomas Bertram Lance, president of the National Bank of Georgia, was virtually certain to join the Carter administration—possibly as secretary of the treasury or director of the office of management and budget.

Carter officials, acting in response to inquiries from reporters, issued a two-page statement Wednesday night detailing loans made by the bank to Carter's peanut warehousing business, a partnership of the president-elect, his brother, Billy, and their mother, Lillian.

Most of the debt was in the form of a revolving line of credit to allow the warehouse to pay farmers for their peanuts.

A source close to Carter said he saw no potential conflict of interest stemming from the loans as long as Lance, who was Georgia's secretary of transportation when Carter was governor, divests himself of his stock holdings in the bank before taking a federal post.

"There is virtually no doubt that Bert Lance will be going to Washington with Gov. Carter to serve in a cabinet or cabinet-level post," Granum said, adding that Carter has made "no final decision" on what job Lance would get.

Granum said Carter's warehouse currently owes the National Bank of Georgia $3,692,048 borrowed to finance its purchases of peanuts from growers during the harvest in late summer and early fall.

He said the loan, which had totalled $3.9 million, is being paid off as the peanuts are sold.

Granum said Billy Carter, who manages the business, lined up seven potential lenders and recommended that the money to carry the partnership's peanut inventory be borrowed from Lance's bank.

Granum said that Jimmy Carter agreed and that Billy signed the loan documents, secured by the inventory and other warehouse assets.

Frisco Sniper Crackdown

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Conceding "there are no safe neighborhoods now" in what has been called everybody's favorite city, San Francisco Mayor George Moscone Wednesday took extreme steps to crack down on uncontrolled random snipings and other street crime.

Acting in the wake of 38 unsolved motiveless shootings on city streets this year, including the murder Saturday night of prominent philanthropist Edwin Golden, 66, as he walked his dog, Moscone announced a $1.7 million plan to beef up police security.

He also promised action to protect riders of city buses and trolleys who have been subjected in broad daylight to random attacks and robberies by youths.

Moscone also called on help from citizens, saying, "everyone must be a police officer."

The concern with city crime has been getting continual space on the front pages of the San Francisco newspapers.

Wednesday's Chronicle, in addition to a lead story on Moscone's anti-crime plans, carried a major article about a visiting New York City taxi driver who Tuesday became the 38th sniper shooting victim.

The cabbie, Bernard Ostrager, 55, was shot in the leg in morning daylight as he put money in a parking meter near the cable car termnial downtown while his wife and siter-in-law sat in their rented car.

"In this city I'd be edgy back on the streets," he said.

Police believe Golden, one of the nation's top insurance agents, and Donald E. Smith, a flower market manager who was shot to death Friday night, were killed with the same pistol. Witnesses in both cases said teenage blacks were involved.

Moscone said his plan will include 55 patrol teams who will ride buses and trolleys "during the high-crime hours of 11 a.m. to 7 p.m., Monday through Friday." In addition, a number of policemen who now hold office jobs will be reassigned to street patrol, the mayor said.

34 HURT AS TRAIN DERAILS

CHICAGO (UPI) — An Amtrak passenger train, the Panama Limited, en route from Chicago to New Orleans with about 250 passengers, derailed early today one mile north of Dyersburg, Tenn., and 34 persons were taken to a local hospital.

Amtrak spokesman Joseph Vranich said the entire train, consisting of 11 cars and three locomotives, went off the tracks at 4:01 a.m. CST. He said three of the cars went on their sides, two were leaning and six others were upright but off the tracks.

There were no fatalities, he said, and the extent of injuries was not immediately known. The injured were taken to Park View Memorial Hospital in Dyersburg, 78 miles north of Memphis.

The train was No. 59 which left Chicago at 6:10 p.m. Wednesday. Vranich said he did not know the cause of the derailment.

Fourth Escaper Back in Oakalla

BURNABY (CP) — RCMP have recaptured the fourth man who escaped Nov. 13 from the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre (Oakalla).

RCMP said the man was arrested when members of the Burnaby RCMP drug squad raided a house in the municipality.

Ivan James Srebot, 27, has been charged with escaping lawful custody.

The three other escapers have been recaptured.

FAMILY HOUR BAN APPEALED

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. National Association of Broadcasters has decided to appeal a judge's ban on television's "family viewing hour."

The NAB said Wednesday that the Nov. 4 decision by U.S. district court Judge Warren Feguson of Los Angeles "strongly and correctly" reaffirms the U.S. constitutions first amendment's "prohibition against government intgerference with broadcast programming."

But it said portions of Ferguson's decision could destroy the NAB's television and radio codes and set a precedent for imposing damages on the NAB for alleged violations of the first amendment.

The NAB said it will appeal any damages and "those portions of the decision that appear to preclude broadcasting's right to engage in meaningful, voluntary industry self-regulation."

The judge ruled that the Federal Communications Commission forced the television industry into adopting the family hour — programming suitable for all members of the family between 7 and 9 p.m.

Youth Cleared Of Killing Mom

LITCHFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Playwright Arthur Miller, who helped lead the campaign to clear Peter Reilly of his mother's murder, says an investigation should be made to find out why key evidence was withheld.

Reilly, 21, wept when Superior Court Judge Simon Cohen threw out the case Wednesday after receiving written statements from the prosecution that Reilly was elsewhere when his mother, Barbara Gibbons, was stabbed and beaten to death in her Falls Village home in September, 1973.

He had confessed to the crime after two days of almost continuous questioning by state police and was convicted of manslaughter in 1974. Reilly later said police convinced him he was guilty.

Reilly's case attracted widespread publicity with the aid of several noted supporters, including Miller, author of Death of a Salesman and other plays. A community effort raised money for an appeal bond and defence fund.

After lawyers and investigators gathered new evidence, a judge ruled last March that Reilly's conviction was a "grave injustice" and said a new trial would likely have a different outcome.

Miller said after the court session that he blamed the suppression evidence on John Bianchi, state's attorney and prosecutor for this rural community, who died earlier this year and was replaced by Dennis Santore.

Santore declined to comment on the evidence or say whether an appeal would be made of the dismissal.

U.S. South Swells By 5.1 Million

WASHINGTON (WP) — The south grew by 5.1 million people in the first half of this decade — more than the combined growth of the rest of the country, the U.S. census bureau reported Wednesday.

It was the first time in the bureau's series of mid-decade population estimates that the south had exceeded the rest of the country in total growth. The other three regions increased by 4.2 million in the period from 1970 to 1975.

Moreover, the south's population growth rate nearly equalled that of the west, which for decades has been gaining population faster than the rest of the country.

It grew at a rate of 8.1 per cent, almost matching the west's 8.3 per cent and far exceeding the national rate of 4.8 per cent.

Southern growth was largely at the expense of the northeast. The population growth in many of that region's states was small, and New York became the first large industrial state in modern times to suffer an actual decline in a five-year period. Its population fell by 121,000 persons.

Empress pastry chef George Wagner with sculpture

Edible or Inedible, Chef's Art Is a Winner

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Master chef George Wagner of the Empress Hotel doesn't agree with those who contend sculpture made of inedible materials has no place in the culinary profession.

"It's still part of the culinary art, meant to complement the rest of the table," he says.

Wagner has just returned from Frankfurt where he was one of 26 chefs on the Canadian team in the World Culinary Olympics.

He reports that one of the least edible entries of table sculpture drew world-wide praise.

"The French team used noodle dough to make two castles and they were exquisite," he said, "It just shows how you can get carried away with your art."

Chef teams from more than 30 countries competed in the Frankfurt Olympics, which was won by Switzerland. Canada came second with 30 gold medals. Tied in third spot were the French and American teams.

This was the third time Canada had entered and the highest showing for Canadians.

A pastry chef, Wagner was the first Victorian to compete and contributed two gold medals to the Canadian score.

He received this medal for his sugar blowing entry, which was a series of three girls, sculptured after the Renaissance style. Wagner was also presented with a silver tray for this entry.

His second entry was sculptured in chocolate. It included an Eskimo and Indian, as well as such items as a grizzly bear, Canada goose, bison, deer and salmon.

Wagner attributed much of the Canadian team's success to the popularity of the dishes they served, particularly the hot ones.

Not only did the chefs have to convince the judges of their superiority; they also had to produce dishes that appealed to the public.

"Finland, for instance, was disqualified (in hot dishes) because nobody wanted to eat Finnish food," he said.

The Canadian hot dish entries included the traditional roast beef, Canada goose, Arctic char and beefalo (cattle crossed with buffalo).

The team also had to prepare 12 cold dishes and eight hot dishes that were presented to the judges after they had cooled.

And, although Wagner says he and his peers do not consider inedible sculpture to be inferior, he explained those competing in that section also had to produce side dishes of such things as petit fours and chocolates.

Consider light colors, which reflect more light, when redecorating ceilings and walls because fewer or lower-wattage lamps will be needed.

WHERE THE BABY'S WEIGHT GOES

Nutrition Buyline

I have just learned the great news that I am pregnant. My physician told me I should gain about 25 pounds during my pregnancy. I want to do what is best for my first baby, but is it really necessary to gain that much weight to have a 7 to 8 pound baby?

ANSWER:

Yes, it is very important to gain 25 pounds during pregnancy in order to have a healthy 7 to 8 pound baby. The normal weight gain consists of:

Baby	7½ lbs
Breast	1
Placenta	1½
Uterus	2
Blood	3½
Fluids, Tissues	5
Maternal Stores	4½
Total	25 lbs.

Limiting weight gain is dangerous because of the possibility of adverse effects on birth weight and brain development of your baby.

QUESTION:

My son's coach has told him he needs more protein during the football season. Now my son wants to have steak at every meal. Is there any basis behind this?

ANSWER:

The belief held by many athletes and other active persons that hard exercise increases the need for protein has no scientific support. Carbohydrate and calorie needs are increased, however, because of the higher activity level of a football player your son should be eating a diet based on the four food groups. The increased needs of an athlete can be obtained by additional servings of breads, cereals, pastas, vegetables and fluids.

QUESTION:

Does the color of the shell have any effect on the nutritive value of the egg?

ANSWER:

The nutritive value of an egg is not related to the color of the shell. Colour is determined by the breed of hen.

Christmas Fruit Bars

6by Mary Moore

QUESTION: Last year I was a new and timid bride and did only a minimum of Christmas baking for we were invited to my husband's folks for Christmas dinner. But I did do one batch of baking. Your Christmas Fruit Bars were given in our paper late in October so encouraged by your comments I made a panful. My husband enjoyed them so much I made another panful late the same evening. He wants them again and I'm desperate for I cannot find the recipe. Corky L.

ANSWER: Bless you Corky. I thought that recipe was one of my greater successes too and am delighted to repeat it for 1976 Christmas bakers.

CHRISTMAS FRUIT BARS

½ c. butter
½ c. sugar
1 tsp. grated orange rind (from 1 medium orange)
2 tbsp. fresh frozen orange juice concentrate (not diluted)
¼ tsp. almond extract
1¼ c. sifted all-purpose flour (divided — see below)
½ tsp. baking soda
¼ tsp. salt
1 egg
2-3 c. chopped mixed glace (Christmas cake) fruits
½ c. chopped nuts

Sift and measure flour. Measure fruits into a small bowl. Mix ¼ cup of the flour with the fruits. (IF some of the cherries are whole cut them in half.)

Into beater bowl measure the butter, sugar and orange rind. Turn on beaters and beat for 5 minutes. Add orange juice concentrate and almond extract and beat in. Add the remaining 1 cup flour, baking soda and salt and beat. Add egg and beat in. Lift beaters and fold in fruits and nuts. Turn batter into buttered 9x9" pan (preferably teflon-lined for easy removal). Push batter into corners and smooth top. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 16 to 18 minutes. Do not overbake. Cool and frost with:

ORANGE FROSTING

¼ tbsp. butter
1¼ c. icing sugar
1½ tbsp. fresh frozen orange

Beat until smooth. Spread over cooled bars in pan. Cut into 1 or 1½" squares or 1x2" bars. These freeze well if carefully packaged.

These squares are exceptionally good. One test-taster said that they would be a good substitute for Christmas cake for those who do not want to go to the bother of making Christmas cake — such as some of our live-alone-seniors. I thought she had a good idea.

Celery Peas

17-ounce can small early peas
1 cup diced ¼-inch celery
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
Canned drained pimiento, diced if desired.

Drain the liquid from the peas into a 1-quart saucepan; add the celery. Boil gently, covered, until tender-crisp — 3 to 5 minutes. Add peas and butter; reheat. If used, stir in the pimiento. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

There's a Story Behind That Heraldry

elizabeth forbes

I've received my first calendar for the year 1977. One chosen by the I.O.D.E. (Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire) for distribution to its thousands of members across Canada.

Mine came to me as a gift from Victoria's Major John Flebden Gillespie Chapter, in which I am an honorary vice-regent.

The past two years (1975-76) I.O.D.E. calendars have features official floral emblems of our 10 provinces and two territories. In 1977, however, you will see something entirely different.

Each calendar month is headed by the arms of the provinces and territories, in alphabetical order, from January to December, and all "suitable for framing" as it says on the cover.

On that cover, in a perfect color reproduction, is the Arms of Canada.

An accompanying page gives a full description of the various parts of this Coat of Arms, a description I have found so interesting — and from which I have learned so much — I'm going to repeat it today in this column.

If you read on, and you also keep close check on the accompanying reproduction of the Arms, I'm sure you will find, as I did, that you really didn't know (or perhaps remember) how it was made up not what some of the different parts represent.

Did you know (or did you remember) that Canada obtained its first coat of arms shortly after Confederation, by the Royal Warrant of Queen Victoria, dated May 26, 1868?

Or, that the Coat of Arms of that time consisted only of the arms of four provinces, arranged quarterly on one shield?

At first, as other provinces joined Confederation, an attempt was made to incorporate their arms into that federal composite design.

Result, as you will guess, was very crowded and confusing as well as "being heraldically unsatisfactory" the calendar tells us.

So the Canadian government submitted a request to the Sovereign for a new grant of arms. The request was approved and on November 21, 1921, Canada obtained a new, well designed and heraldically accurate coat of arms.

The calender then goes on to remind us that the shield is divided into five sections representing England, Scotland, Ireland, France and, in the lower section, the Canadian emblem, three maple leaves conjoined on one stem.

Supporters are a lion holding a lance from which flies the Union Flag and a unicorn holding a similar lance flying the banner of royalist France.

Now, let me ask you if you know anything about the Arms of British Columbia? Or do you take a casual look if — and when — you happen to see this province's Coat of Arms, and forget all about it within minutes of that look?

I'll confess I didn't know B.C.'s shield was granted by Royal Warrant dated March 31, 1906.

Nor can I be sure I was aware that in the centre of the Union Jack, which tops the shield, there is small gold Antique Crown.

Below, on a ground of blue and silver wavy bars, is the gold half sun. Above the shield is a Royal Crown surmounted by a lion also wearing the Crown, and supporting the shield on the left is a Wapiti and on the right a Mountain Sheep.

Scroll at the bottom has the words "Splendor Sine Occasu" — Splendor Without Diminishment.

In the calendar each province and territory has a description of its coat of arms. Each one is tremendously interesting.

Perhaps you will see the I.O.D.E. calendar for 1977 and read about these Coats of Arms yourseves.

You could even by lucky enough to own a calendar in this coming year. I hope so!

POST SCRIPT — A reminder that Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova comes to Victoria tomorrow morning at the end of a three-month trans-Canada speaking tour in connection with the Unitarian Services Committee of Canada's annual campaign for funds — with a Christmas target of $2,500,000 in Friendship Dollars and gifts-in-kind.

You will have an opportunity to meet and talk to her at a public meeting Monday evening in the Georgian Room at the Empress Hotel, where she will speak on the needs of the poor, the starving and the orphans around the world. She will also show a slide presentation "Tomorrow Could Be Kind."

The USC representative here, Mrs. E. G. Woodward, 949 Grilse Lane, telephone 652-2025 is in charge of arrangements for the visit.

Dr. Lotta will leave Victoria again on Tuesday afternoon, November 30.

IRENE'S CHICKEN

Interesting and easy to assemble.

- 1 large onion

- ½ cup dry white wine
- ¼ cup dry sherry
- ½ teaspoon dry crushed rosemary
- ¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon juniper berries
- Salt and pepper to taste
- ½ cup commercial sour cream
- Minced parsley.

Chop onion, carrot, celery and ginger fine. Turn into a large deep skillet or Dutch oven with the remaining ingredients except the sour cream and parsley. Makes 6 servings.

Genetic Factors and Drink

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

Genetic Factors of Alcoholism

I am a reformed alcoholic. I have been asked to marry by a man who knows my past history. Both of us worry about the possibility that our children, if we have any, may be affected by my past history of alcoholism. — Mrs. S. R.

Dear Mrs. R.:

I never saw specific references to your problem until very recently when a study of this problem was reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association. It said, "Forty-one patients with fetal alcohol syndrome were studied . . . These children have a pattern of defects including prenatal and postnatal growth deficiency, small head size, with mental subnormality and facial abnormalities . . . The same pattern of abnormalities has been independently reported from France in a series of 120 offspring of chronic alcoholics."

The findings made by these investigators show that "damage to the fetus by chronic maternal alcoholism has been one of the most common recognizable causes of mental deficiency."

I am certain that these statistics apply to children whose mothers are alcoholics during the time of pregnancy. I doubt that the same risks apply to a woman who has recovered from the disease of alcoholism.

Nevertheless, it would be wise for you and your future husband to consult a geneticist. These highly trained physicians and scientists can, with moderate certainty, predict, after intensive blood studies, what the chances are of giving birth to a normal child. In your case, I believe the risk is minimal.

Is shortness of breath a sign of heart trouble? I am about 50 pounds overweight and can barely catch my breath when I walk up a flight of stairs.. — Mrs. M. W., Ohio.

Dear Mr. W.:

You have virtually made your own diagnosis and don't have to look any further for the reason for your shortness of breath, or dyspnea.

Anyone would be short of breath if they carried a 50-pound sack of potatoes on their back. You're carrying a sack of fat distributed in different places, but the burden on your heart and lungs is precisely the same.

Shortness of breath can be associated with heart trouble. The exact cause can be completely ruled out by thorough physical examination.

Salt-Water Fish Wormy

By Dr. JEAN MAYER and Dr. JOHANNA DWYER

Q. Recently, I read that salt-water fish can harbor worms. I thought that the danger of worms was possible only in fresh fish. Could you tell me more about this?

A. Anisakiasis, or "Herring-worm Disease" was positively identified in 1955 when the anisakis worm was recovered from the intestine of a man who had suddenly become ill with colicky pain and fever. Exactly how the worm affects its victim apparently depends on which part of the gastrointestinal tract it invades. In the intestine, where it is more commonly found, the anisakis larvae can bore deep into the stomach wall, causing swelling, inflammation and occlusion.

At present, anisakiasis is most commonly found in Japan and the Netherlands where the practice of eating raw fish is common. In fact, in the Netherlands, most cases are discovered shortly after the opening of the herring season.

In the U.S., only seven cases have been reported since 1972. But public health officials are concerned that, if the popularity of raw fish dishes increases, anisakiasis could become a greater problem. Moreover, it may well be that as we become more aware of the possibility of this type of infection, it may be diagnosed more frequently.

A number of salt-water fish species may harbor anisakian larvae. They have been found in cod, mackerel and salmon, in addition to herring. The worm is able to survive both normal refrigeration and pickling, but can be killed by both heat and freezing.

So if you must eat raw fish, it shoull be kept frozen at five degrees below zero for at least 24 hours.

Q. I had thought that the calories in bran were unavailable but the label on my all-bran cereal says that it contains 60 calories in a half-cup serving. Is that true?

A. You can indeed expect to get 60 calories from a half cup of all-bran cereal, but that's only about three-fifths of the calories the cereal contains. The rest of the carbohydrate calories in the indigestible bran are indeed unavailable. If you look at the label, you will find that a half-cup serving contains three grams of protein, 19 grams of carbohydrate and one gram of fat. Since both protein and carbohydrate provide roughly four calories per gram, and fat, nine calories per gram, a half-cup of the cereal actually had 97 calories—and that's not counting the sugar you add which, of course, is all calories, and completely available.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Ginger Cake

1½ cups flour
¾ teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon ground ginger
½ cup water
1 teaspoon instant coffee
½ cup butter or margarine
2 large eggs
½ cup sugar
½ cup molasses

On wax paper stir together the flour, baking soda and ginger. In a small saucepan over low heat stir together the water, coffee and butter until butter melts and mixture is very hot. Beat together the eggs, sugar and molasses until combined; add hot coffee mixture and flour mixture; beat gently just until smooth — batter will be thin. Turn into a greased 9 by 9 by 1¾-inch cake pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in centre comes out clean — about 20 minutes. Loosen edges and turn out on a wire rack. Must be served warm from the oven or reheated. Makes 9 servings.

Protection Needed

A protective mat must be placed between a deep-fryer cooker and any surface before plugging in the cord.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from HEAVY-HEARTED DAD whose pregnant daughter wasn't even through eighth grade, I had to write. This is for all teenage girls whose boyfriends try to pressure them into going all the way:

I'm 16 and my boyfriend is 18. Sure, we go parking and make out, but when he mentions fourth base, I set him straight right away.

My feeling is this: We have our whole lives ahead of us, so why take a chance on ruining it when we're young?

If your boyfriend says, "If you love me, you'll prove it be going all the way," tell him to get lost. Keep a level head and don't ever go so far you can't turn back. It's not worth it. Sign me . . . —A FIRM "NO"

DEAR FIRM: Congratulations! Fifteen years ago I wrote a book, "DEAR TEENAGER," but the chapter "Should I Prove My Love?" is still sound advice for teenagers. And here it is:

Girls need to "prove their love" through illicit sex relations like a moose needs a hat rack.

Why not "prove your love" by sticking your head in the oven and turning on the gas? Or playing leap-frog out in the traffic? It's about as safe.

Clear the cobwebs out of your head: Any fellow who asks you to 'prove your love' is trying to take you for the biggest, most gullible fool who ever walked. That proving bit is one of the oldest and rottenest lines ever invented!

Does HE love YOU? It doesn't sound like it. Someone who loves you wants whatever is best for you. But now figrue it out. He wants you to:

Commit an immoral act . . .
Surrender your virtue . . .
Throw away your self-respect . .
Risk the loss of your precious reputation . . .
And risk getting into trouble . . .

Does that sound as though he wants what's best for you? This is the laugh of the century He wants what's best for HIM . . . he wants what's best for HIM . . . he wants a thrill he can brag about at your expense

Love? Who's kidding whom! A boy who loves a girl would sooner cut off his right arm than hurt her. If you want my opinion, this self-serving so-and-so has already proved that he DOESN'T love you.

The predictable aftermath of "proof" of this kind always finds Don Juan tiring of his sport. That's when he drops YOU, picks up his line and goes casting elsewhere for bigger and equally silly fish.

There's No Magic in Souffles

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

Although souffles are counted among the most elegant, if not sublime, conceits of the kitchen, they are not all that difficult to make. It is, in fact, easier to turn out a successful, well-puffed souffle than a perfectly scrambled egg or a succulent, golden brown roast fowl. One of the critical points in souffle-making is the folding in of the beaten egg whites. This is simplified if a portion of the beaten whites is beaten into the basic mixture and the remainder folded in quickly but deftly with a rubber spatula. Two excellent souffles are outlined here — a crab and eggplant dish plus a cheese souffle that is baked on a base of creamed salmon. There is one thing for certain. Souffles must be served with the greatest dispatch the moment they are taken from the oven.

Seafood and eggplant souffle

1 eggplant, about 1½ pounds
7 tablespoons butter
7 tablespoons flour
3 cups milk
¾ cup heavy cream
2 tablespoons cornstarch
3 tablespoons water
Salt and freshly ground pepper
½ teaspoon cayenne pepper
⅛ teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg
8 eggs, separated
¾ cup finely grated Parmesan cheese
½ cup grated Swiss, Gruyere or Fontina cheese
3 tablespoons shallots
1 teaspoon finely minced garlic
½ teaspoon chopped fresh thyme
2 cups flaked lump backfin crab meat, or cubed shrimp or lobster
2 tablespoons prepared mustard, preferably imported mustard such as Dijon or Dusseldorf

1. Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

2. Wrap the eggplant in foil and bake about 40 minutes or until it is thoroughly tender and collapsed. Remove and run under cold eater until it is cool enough to handle. (Do not turn the oven off.) Open the skin and scrape out the tender insides. There should be about one and one-half cups. Set aside.

3. Generously butter a nine- or 10-cup souffle dish and place it in the freezer of refrigerator to chill.

4. Melt five tablespoons of butter in a saucepan and add the flour. Cook, stirring with a wire whisk, until blended. Add milk, stirring rapidly with the whisk. Cook until thickened and smooth. Continue to cook about five minutes, stirring frequently with the whisk. Add one-half cup cream and stir to blend.

5. Blend the cornstarch with water and stir it into the sauce. Add salt and pepper to taste, cayenne and nutmeg. Cook, stirring, about five minutes and remove the saucepan from the heat. Let the sauce cool briefly and add the egg yolks, beating vigorously with the whisk.

6. Return the sauce to the heat and cook briefly, stirring rapidly, about 30 seconds, no longer. Stir in the grated cheeses. Spoon and scrape the sauce into a large mixing bowl and set aside. Cover and let cool.

7. Melt remaining two tablespoons butter in a saucepan and add the shallots. Add the garlic, thyme and eggplant. Cover and cook five minutes. Fold in the seafood, remaining cream and mustard. Spoon the eggplant mixture into the prepared souffle dish.

8. Beat the egg whites until frothy and add salt to taste. Continue beating until very stiff. Spoon about one-quarter of the beaten whites into the egg yolk and cheese mixture and beat to incorporate them thoroughly. Add the remaining beaten whites and fold them in. Spoon this on top of the seafood and eggplant base. Place in the oven and reduce heat to 375 degrees. Bake 30 to 45 minutes, depending on the texture desired. Serve immediately.

Yield: Six to eight servings, more

Cheese and salmon with mushrooms souffle

1 recipe for creamed salmon with mushrooms (see recipe)
4 tablespoons butter
5 tablespoons flour
3 cups milk
Salt and freshly ground pepper
¼ teaspoon grated nutmeg
⅛ teaspoon cayenne pepper
1 tablespoon water
1 teaspoon cornstarch
8 large eggs, separated
1/3 pound finely grated Parmesan cheese, about 1 cup
1/3 pound finely cubed Gruyere or Swiss cheese, about 1 cup

1. Butter generously an eight-or-nine-cup souffle dish. Place the dish in the freezer temporarily.

2. Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

3. Heat the four tablespoons butter in a saucepan and add the flour, stirring with a wire whisk. Add the milk, thickened and smooth, add salt and pepper to taste, nutmeg and cayenne. Blend the water and cornstarch and stir it in.

4. Beat the yolks and add them to the mixture, stirring rapidly. Bring just to the boil but do not boil. Remove immediately from the heat, stirring. Spoon the mixture into a mixing bowl and fold in the Parmesan cheese and two-thirds of the Gruyere.

5. Beat the whites until stiff and beat in about one-third of them into the souffle mixture. Fold in the remaining whites, using a plastic or rubber spatula.

6. Pour the salmon mixture into the prepared souffle dish. Add the souffle mixture and smooth it over. Sprinkle the top with the remaining cubed cheese. Place in the oven.

7. Reduce the heat to 375 degrees and bake 30 to 45 minutes, depending on the texture desired. The lesser time will produce a more moist souffle. Serve immediately, dipping into the souffle so that the guest has both souffle and the salmon base.

Yield: eight servings.

Creamed salmon with mushrooms

3 cups canned or freshly poached salmon broken into fairly large bite-size morsels
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1 tablespoon finely chopped shallot, optional
½ pound fresh mushrooms, thinly sliced, about 3½ cups
2 tablespoons flour
½ cup dry white wine
½ cup liquid from canned salmon (or use fish broth or bottled clam juice)
½ cup heavy cream
1 tablespoon chopped parsely
Salt and freshly ground pepper.

1. If canned salmon is used, drain the liquid from the can and set aside for later use. Break up the salmon and set aside.

2. Heat the butter in a deep skillet and add the onion and shallot. Cook, stirring, until onion wilts. Add the mushrooms and sprinkle with the flour. Add the wine and salmon liquid, stirring rapidly with a wire whisk. When thickened and smooth, let simmer five minutes.

3. Add the heavy cream, parsely and salt and pepper to taste. Fold in the salmon and heat through.

Yield: Four servings if served with rice or toast or eight servings if used as the base for a cheese souffle.

By Lynn and Joel Rapp

DEAR LYNN AND JOEL: As you know, we are great advocates of "things natural," such as the use of substitution of herbs whenever possible. We recently came acorss a newspaper article, unsubstantiated, to be sure, but worthy of passing along, warning that some herbs might prove to be more dangerous than beneficial. It read, in part:

"According to Dr. Ronald K. Siegel, there are now 192 herbs for sale in North American stores as smoking substances and 396 herbs and spices used to make herbal teas. The use of these herbs for both medical and non-medical purposes — they are primarily for sale in food stores and mail-order houses — has increased sharply during the past two years.

"Siegel, a research psychologist in the department of psychiatry at UCLA medicals-chool, said he has interviewed a number of persons who have sought help at the Neuropsychiatric Institute after experiencing problems following use of the herbs.

"Of the 396 herbs and spices used singly or as blends to make tea, 43 contain psychoactive substances. They are African yohimbe bark, Scotch broom, California poppy, catnip, cinnamon, damiana, hydrangea, juniper, kavakava, kola nut, lobelia, mandrake, mate, Mormon tea, nutmeg, passion flower, periwinkle, prickly poppy, snakeroot, thorn ale, tobacco, valerian, wild lettuce and wormwood."

Dr. Siegel goes on to describe the possible sumptoms of using these herbs and strongly warns against their use until further research can be completed. As we said, although there is nothing definitely yet established, we would certainly advise caution in purchasing these herbs. We're going to, that's for sure.

Opening lead: King of ◇.

After winning the opening diamond lead with his ace, declarer led a club to dummy's ace. Next came a diamond, but not any old diamond: the JACK of diamonds was led!

From the very beginning, it was quite evident that East had to be kept out of the lead. With West having made a spade overcall, he was a cinch to possess the spade ace. And if East ever obtained the lead, he would play a spade, decapitating South's king. Hence the lead of the diamond jack, to make sure that West, with the known queen, would obtain the lead.

West captured the jack with the queen, and returned a trump. Had declarer taken the finesse, he would have gone down a couple of tricks. East would have won with the king and led the spade jack. After West had taken two spade tricks, he would have led back a third spade, which East would have ruffed.

Declarer won West's trump return with the board's ace. He then trumped a diamond, and on the king and queen of clubs he discarded dummy's five and eight of spades. With dummy's two remaining diamonds being the only ones left in the deck, all the defenders could make from here in were a spade trick and East's king of trumps.

In retrospect, if West had possessed the clairvoyance to have led a trump at trick one, declarer would probably have gone down before he ever won a trick. In all probability, he would have taken the finesse, East's king winning. The jack of spades would then have been led — and I would have had no story to tell.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Friday, November 26

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Words of praise are fine, but be sure to back them up — friends could be financially embarrassed. Pisces, Aquarius and Virgo figure in picture. Emphasis on money, speculation, romantic involvement, impulsive actions, flattery, expensive tastes. Come down from the clouds!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Build, organize, accept responsibility, be ready for relationship to intensify. Nothing will be tepid — it will be either hot or cold, all or nothing. Cancer, Capricorn figure prominently. An agreement offing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You complete circle, popularity increases, a relationship is tested. Travel, education, basic issues come into focus. What you think is starting may be trailing off into the past. Aries, Libra are part of your personal scenario.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Take lead, be independent, be original, allow creative juices to flow. Leo, Aquarius persons are in picture. Accent on hidden objects, emotional responses, financial status of partner, mate. You find out who loves you — and otherwise. You face truth, the heart of matters.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Time is on your side. Means refuse to be rushed, pushed, intimidated. Applies especially where contracts, special relationships, long-term agreements are concerned. A property or ownership dispute will be settled.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Diversify. Travel, communicate and socialize. You may be putting on weight as some diet rules are smashed to smithereens. If so, enjoy! Feeling guilty only compounds original error. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Speculation, "gambling instinct" surges forward — give logic equal time. Tighten strings around budget. Stop giveaway — get something of value in return for efforts. Youth, romance, creativity, spontaneity all figure prominently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You overturn preconceived notions. You renew acquaintances, become familiar again with rules, regulations basic values. Explain position — get thoughts, ideas in writing. Be analytical. Take nothing for granted. Surprise element is featured. Older person kicks up heals.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Diplomacy, tenderness, consideration for family member — these are accented. You have more dealings with relatives than in recent past. You discover "hidden talent" of niece, nephew or other young person close to you. Taurus, Libra and Aquarius figure prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone is seeking something for nothing — and you could be target. Know it and don't fall prey to get-rich-quick scheme. Insist on factual information, not pie-in-sky promises. Accent on valuables, personal possessions, money potential. Pisces is in picture along with Virgo.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You get results — what you seek is available. You get opportunity for advancement. Key is to organize priorities. Advancement, promotion, better communications with professional superiors — these are spotlighted. Cash flow improves. YOU'LL FEEL MORE SECURE.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You are relieved of burden. Atmosphere is transformed from heavy to light. You gain understanding of administration, of inner workings of organization. Pace changes — you have more time to collect thoughts and to get them on paper.

IF NOVEMBER 26th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY ... you have strong convictions, you battle for causes — you are attractive to opposite sex ... you understand subtle nuances of making money and love. Capricorn, Cancer persons play key roles in your life. You may have changed residence this year — there was a domestic adjustment. November was a month of getting financial house in order. You finish important project in December.

SAME ROLE, 14 YEARS LATER

OTTAWA (CP) — "I'm like an athelete going into training," says actress Diane Stapley, preparing for the musical, The Fantasticks, which opens at the National Arts Centre for a three-week run, Nov. 29.

It is the second time the 31-year-old singer-actress will play the role of Luisa for the same director, Marigold Charlesworth.

Diane was 17 years old and "all instinct."

"Looking back on it, I was Luisa a girl who lives in a fantasy world," she recalled in an interview Wednesday. "I was going around saying: 'That girl is crazy' when I was a perfect Luisa myself."

PQ Election Victory Had Margaret 'Panicky'

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. — Margaret Trudeau, wife of Prime Minister Trudeau, said Wednesday she was surprised and "panicky almost" when she first learned that the Parti Quebecois had won the Nov. 15 Quebec election. However, she said her husband reassured her that Rene Levesque, leader of the pro-separatist party, is an "honest, rational man." Mrs. Trudeau made the comment in answer to a question from the audience at a lecture series for women at Sir Sandford Fleming College.

"Pierre has fought so long and so hard for national unity," Mrs. Trudeau said. "I think it would be very sad to see the break-up of Canada. It would be the end of a dream."

WASHINGTON — Career diplomat Malcolm Toon was named the new U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union on Wednesday, signalling an end to Soviet hopes of blocking his appointment. Moscow had delayed giving its approval of Toon for more than two months because of the Soviet specialist's hard-line views. Toon will be able to take up his post almost immediately since informed sources said the incoming Carter administration plans to keep Toon on the job.

OTTAWA — Claude Castonguay has resigned as the Anti-Inflation Board's Quebec regional member to return to work with a private consulting company, the board announced Wednesday. His resignation is effective Dec. 4. Castonguay, an actuary, was appointed to the board in the fall of 1975. At the time he said he was only prepared to serve on the board for one year. Castonguay was an insurance company executive, a businessman and a member of the Quebec cabinet.

MIAMI — Like many couples, Harry and Florence encountered family problems when they announced their intention to wed. But their troubles were more complicated than most. Harry, 92, at the insistence of his nephew, was declared mentally incompetent, preventing him from marrying Florence, 85.

"We can't control the actions of a family," Joyce Olafson, director of nursing at the county home at which Harry and Florence live, said Wednesday.

Nobody visited Harry except the lawyer who tended some investments from Harry's days as an architect. Harry and Gertrude had been childless. Later, he became ill and a nephew from Indiana turned up. The nephew asked for a loan, but didn't get it, nursing home officials say.

The nephew went to court to get Harry declared incompetent, Anders said. The motion was approved and Harry's lawer was assigned as his legal guardian.

MOSCOW — Veteran Soviet diplomat Jacob Malik has quietly relinquished his job as Moscow's permanent representative to the United Nations and is working in Moscow as a deputy foreign minister, it was learned Tuesday. His departure from the world organization was confirmed by a spokesman for the Soviet-run UN information office. "Malik is not our representative at the UN," the spokesman said. "As far as I know no appointment of his successor has been made yet."

WORLD PREMIERE of a composition by Vancouver artist Sylvia Rickard will be included in the Music Now program being presented tonight jointly by Art Gallery of Greater Victoria and the Conservatory of Music at the Gallery, 1040 Moss. The concert of contemporary guitar music will feature classical guitarist Alan Rinehart and assisting artists in works by a number of Canadian and B.C. composers. Ms. Rickard's work is entitled Leprechaun Suite. The concert begins at 8 tonight with doors open at 7:30. There is a charge of 50 cents for non gallery members.

MYSTERY AIR PIRATE INDICTED

PORTLAND, Ore. — Dan Cooper, who got a $200,000 air piracy ransom five years ago but may not have successfully parachuted from the plane with the cash, has been indicted just in case he survived the escapade.

Authorities said they sought the indictment, handed down Wednesday by a federal grand jury here, because of fear that Cooper might go free if a five-year statute of limitations expired.

On Thanksgiving Eve in 1971, a hijacker calling himself Dan Cooper jumped from a Northwest Airlines 727 jet that had travelled from here to Seattle.

SISTER FOUND

WINDSOR, Ont. — An 18-year-old Vancouver man found part of his family this week — one of the 12 brothers and sisters he has never seen. Charlie Shawanigonebi met his sister, Ida Allen, Tuesday after hitch-hiking across Canada in search of his long-scattered family.

The family broke up shortly after his birth and the 13 children were placed in foster homes.

He started his search here and tracked down his sister with the aid of a newspaper story. He knew only that her first name was Ida and she had married a Ford Motor Co. of Canada workers.

MiG Designer Dies

MOSCOW — Mikhail I. Gurevich, 84, a pioneer aircraft designer who helped build the Soviet Union's renowned MiG fighter planes, has died, Pravda said today.

Gurevich was co-designer with the late Artem I. Mikoyan, of MiGs, beginning with the MiG1 in 1940.

Fron 1938 to 1957, Gurevich was assistant director of airplane construction and served as its head until 1964.

The team of Mikoyan and Gurevich is credited with introducing the Soviet Union's first modern jet fighter plane, the MiG 15.

For his contribution to Soviet defence, he was awarded the title Hero of Socialist Labor, the Lenin Prize and the Soviet State Prize.

There's nothing like having a cushion or surplus in your Personal Chequing Account to take care of unexpected emergencies or opportunities—but at what price? After all, PCAs don't pay interest. But TD does the next best thing.

No-charge chequing

For those times that your monthly statement shows a constant cushion of $200. (or more) throughout a whole statement period, TD cancels all chequing charges for that period . . . automatically!

So if you write a fair number of cheques No-Charge Chequing could be good value. Ask about it at your nearest TD branch.

TD Personal Chequing Account statement periods cover four or five weeks. On the last day of each period the statements are checked to see if No-Charge Chequing applies. No-Charge Chequing includes all TD PCAs except TD Personal Service Plan which has a flat monthly fee.

Let Children Compost Leaves

A reader is asking for information on a new method of composting oak leaves to have them ready for use in six to eight months.

No new method has come to my attention. There would be nothing unusual in it because any oak leaves made into a heap in fall are ready for use the following spring.

The only exception is leaves of thick texture and glossy surface, such as laurel. These may take a year or more to decompose to a usable condition.

The fact that leaves do not lose their natural shape when composed is misleading to home gardeners. If the heap was torn down and rebuilt three of four times during winter their shape would no longer be evident.

For most of us, time and the inclination for work of this kind, are lacking, but there is an alternative if the leaf mould is needed for greenhouse work and potting mixtures in early spring.

All that is needed is a half-inch mesh screen made from heavy "hardware cloth" as it is called, a pair of stout leather gloves and a little elbow grease.

Pushing the wet mass through the screen gives us the true leafmould so essential in many soil mixtures.

For incorporating into vacant soil it is only necessary to dump the wet masses of leaves on the surface and break them apart with a five tined digging fork or a rototiller.

Truck loads of oak leaves were composted each fall in our commercial plant nursery. Details of handling may help, for the method can be easily adapted to the home gardener's need and facilities.

First, a large enclosure was built from 36-inch chicken wire attached to stout stakes driven well into the ground. The leaves were dumped directly into this enclosure.

For quick decomposition it is essential that as much air as possible should be excluded, which means a lot of treading down. Obviously, the more feet on the job the quicker this is accomplished.

This is where a little psychology comes in handy. We know children revel in playing among leaves, so why not let them enjoy themselves in the leaf bin and do the needed compacting at the same time? We just invited the neighborhood children to come and have a good time.

After the first load was well compressed, a sprinkling of nitrate of ammonia went over the surface, followed by a good soaking with water from a hose or sprinkler. The sprinkler does the best job.

When the next load arrived, the children had a few hours more fun, and when compacted the layer had the same treatment with ammonia and water. This continued until the enclosure was filled. The weight of the children playing in the dry leaves further compacted the wet layer beneath.

The leaves on the surface and against the wire remained dry even after a winter of snow and rain, because of exposure to sun and wind, but when pushed aside a brown wet mass is evident ready for immediate use.

The three essentials for quick decomposition of oak leaves are (1) the exclusion of as much air as possible from between the leaves themselves, (2) a nitrogen fertilizer (ammonia) to generate heat and start the decomposing processes, and (3) plenty of water to keep the heap thoroughly damp at all times.

There are several compost activators on the market which take the place of the nitrogenous fertilizer; each has instructions for use with leaves, and it may be one of these our correspondent has heard about. However, the basic method is the same whatever product is used.

WE NEED HELP!
"2 OF US NEED T.L.C."
Both of us are too large and too much work for our owners. I'm a 5-way split and need lots of paint and carpet, but I'm 2200 sq. ft. with 2 full baths, post and beam and "4" bedrooms on a large lot in Glanford area. I have a nice view of the Sooke hills and I have a beautiful fireplace and large family room. My owner has been sick and now I am. Please come and see me (priced at only $64,900).

Now it is my turn, I'm a 30-year-old Colonial home also on a lovely extra large lot with lots of trees. I'm on Wende Rd. between Cedar Hill and McKenzie and no-one can find me. I have 3 super large bedrooms. Utility area with washer and dryer, kitchen with fridge and stove. Separate dining room and a fireplace in my living room. My walls need paint but my construction is good. I have a new roof and eaves. Help me!!

New Appliance Firm Aims for Exports

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A totally new Canadian-controlled appliance company, with an estimated 36 per cent of the Canadian major appliance market, will be formed by the merger of the appliance divisions of GSW Ltd. and Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd., both of Toronto, and by the acquisition of the appliance division of Westinghouse Canada Ltd. of Hamilton.

In a major rationalization of the fractured Canadian appliance industry, the new and as-yet unnamed Canadian company will attempt to increase manufacturing efficiency, lower costs, capture export markets, and reduce Canada's reliance of imports of parts, technology and appliances from the United States.

Jean Chretien, federal minister of industry, trade and commerce, said the merger and acquisition will create a company "more powerful than any other in Canada."

Estimated total sales of the new company, based on sales of the three acquired operations, will be between $300 million and $360 million.

Chretien told reporters that despite the size of the new venture which has received the blessing of the federal government, he does not think there will be any problems under the Combines Investigation Act — adding that this was not a legal opinion, and that the GSW and CGE corporate lawyers had also come to the same conclusion.

Chretien also revealed that he had told the two merging companies (one U.S.-controlled) that they would not have to apply to the Foreign Investment Review Agency for approval of the merger.

He said this decision was based on the commitments given by the companies and on the facts as presented to the government.

The industry minister, responsible for the Foreign Investment Review Act, has the power to make such a ruling under the Act, when requested by a company or companies.

But the Foreign Investment Review Agency (FIRA) plans to monitor the situation to ensure that the act is met as the new company develops.

FIRA and the government are very familiar with the appliance industry, having twice turned down a proposed foreign take over of the appliance division of Westinghouse Canada by U.S.-controlled WCI Canada Ltd.

As proposed, the new appliance company willl be 50 per cent controlled by Canadian-owned GSW Ltd., and 50 per cent controlled by U.S.-controlled Canadian General Electric, in terms of voting common shares in the new company.

Actual disposition of all common shares, including non-voting shares, will be 60 per cent for CGE and 40 per cent for GSW, reflecting the financial resources brought to the new applaince company from the parent companies.

The board of directors will consist of all Canadians, except one U.S. director from CGE who will bring valuable expertise in the major appliance business to the new company, according to CGE Chairman Walter Ward.

Chretien said that the two partners in the new company have given a number of commitments to the federal government, including no plant closings; investment of at least $50 million over the next five years in plant and production improvement; maintenance of the current ratio of employment between existing appliance facilities as employment grows, with the Westinghouse plants to continue normal operations; aiming to become cost competitive internationally and to develop export markets for at least two product lines (likely ranges and refrigeration appliances); and creation of new jobs, starting with 400 new jobs from the merger alone.

Indications from labor leaders are that the unions involved, especially at Westinghouse, will co-operate with the creation of the new company.

Generally, the new company plans to rationalize its product line and increase Canadian content in appliances over the next couple of years, to lesson reliance on imports. Ultimately, plants will be dedicated to single product line production for the range of brand-names to be marketed by the new company.

GSW Chairman Barford said the new company will have the right to market its appliances anywhere in the world, under the merger and acquisition agreements.

The merger is scheduled to be completed on Jan. 4, 1977.

It will include the appliance service organizations as well as the home appliance manufacturing operations of the affected companies.

Wage Increase Drastically Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — Negotiated pay increases for six warehouse employees of Anthes Equipment Ltd., in Burnaby, have been drastically reduced by administrator Donald Tansley.

Tansley ruled that first-year increases for the employees should be held to nine per cent, down from a negotiated 30.97 per cent. Second-year increases were limited to eight per cent, a reduction from 23 per cent.

BUBBLE BLOWERS in Ottawa, competing in the 6th Annual World Bubble Gum Blowing Championship, went through 5,000 pieces of the sticky stuff. Lee LaRock, 9, of New York City, shows how it's done. His massive bubble, which ended up all over his face, clinched the junior title.

HONESTY PAYS . . . AND PAYS

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — John Thompson, a 16-year-old high school student, didn't have enough money for lunch when he found two $20 bills on the floor of his school bus earlier this month.

He turned the money in to the bus driver, and some of his friends called him stupid.

A story about his honesty was published in the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot last week, and since then John has received $1,535 in cash and cheques, shoes, a $25 gift cerificate, two turkeys, a ham, canned food and clothes.

The largest gift was $1,000 from a Richmond postman, Thomas Cannon, who has made an avocation of contributing money to various causes.

He said he was moved by the boy's "monumental honesty and integrity."

"I just don't know what to say," John remarked Wednesday. "I had no idea it was going to turn out like this."

His mother, Mrs. Carolyn Thompson, said she taught her boy to be honest.

"I was upset at first because after the story appeared some of his classmates were calling him stupid for turning in the money, and then I didn't know if we should accept the money or not.

"We're not poor, but we're in need."

She said her minister convinced her that "God wanted John to have it, not because we're desperate, but because it's His way of rewarding John for his good deed."

Soviet-Romania Talks Friendly

BUCHAREST, Romania (WP) — Soviet Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev and Romanian leader Nicolae Ceausescu ended a summit meeting Wednesday with a pledge to further develop the "co-operation and brotherly friendship" that marks the alliance of their two states.

The summit reaffirmed the closeness of the formal ties between the two countries but also reflected Romania's determination not to give up its right to independent action and separate policies.

The Romanians conveyed in a number of ways that they still intend to maintain the special status within the Soviet bloc that they have so assidiously cultivated over the past decade.

On Monday morning, within hours of Brezhnev's arrival for his first visit to Bucharest in ten years, Ceausescu found time for a one-hour meeting with visiting U.S. Secretary of Commerce Elliot Richardson.

N-Plants Like Titanic

TORONTO (CP) — Jacques Cousteau, French explorer and inventor, said Wednesday that nuclear engineers who assure the world they have the atom under control are like the designers of the "unsinkable" luxury liner Titanic, which sank on its maiden voyage in 1912.

Capt. Cousteau told an environment conference that although nuclear scientists assure that all steps have been taken to ensure safety, accidents have happened and there are nuclear plants in a near-disaster state.

He is opposed to any type of nuclear plant anywhere although nuclear plants on land are easier to control than those off-shore.

Capt. Cousteau said he believes energy needs may be met in about 25 years by solar technology, and a nuclear stage to bridge the gap may be avoded by the use of coal, other conventional sources and conservation of resources.

Observer's Future Look Questioned by Ad Men

LONDON — Britain's top advertising men have reacted with profound misgivings to the type of rescue operation that has been launched to save the foundering Observer newspaper.

Their comments are in strange contrast to the complacent gloating being heard today from the commercial and editorial management that has taken the Sunday newspaper to the edge of collapse. Their self-satisfaction is caused by the fact that the new 90-per-cent owner, U.S. oilman Robert Anderson, has said that he will leave all personnel at The Observer exactly as it is now.

Anderson also said unlimited funds would be available to support the paper and that its editorial stance would remain unchanged. This clinched the decision for The Observer Trust, which had feared editorial and personnel changes if The Observer was taken over by Australian newspaper tycoon Rupert Murdoch or British newspaper proprietor Vere Harmsworth.

But the men who advise on where advertising dollars should be spent are not so sure the right choice has been made.

Ian Spear, media director of the Ted Bates advertising agency, said today: "I doubt if it will make it any more attractive to advertisers if they keep the same team."

David Reich, managing director of the Media Department, a company specializing in assessing markets for advertising agencies, said: "Whether it can put on readers without changing its editorial style must be questionable."

Mike Townsin, media director of the Young and Rubicam advertising business will be de agency, said: "I think the advertising business will be delighted if has survived, but I think we would have been happier to see it brought down-market slightly to compete with The Sunday Express."

Facelift Planned For French Coastline

By PAUL NAJENDIE

PARIS (Reuter) — France's coastline—disfigured by developers, saturated with summer vacationers and despoiled by factories—faces rapid ruin, ecologists say.

So the French government, out to stop this pell-mell destruction of the country's natural heritage, has set up a national trust. Its chief aim is to buy up chunks of coastline and put them permanently under state protection.

The Coastal Preservation Association, which has a modest budget of $2.4 million for its first year, is modelled on the British National Trust.

Association chief Dominic Legrin said: "The National Trust served as our model. Our aim is to buy up land, protect it, and open it to the public. The English have been doing it for 80 years so why shouldn't we?

"It is very important to get on with the job of protecting our coastline. In 10 years it will be too late."

Tracing the development of France's coastline, he noted how sharply the problem had worsened.

At the turn of the century, seaside resorts like Deauville, Biarritz and Nice became fashionable but only 10,000 people went to them on vacation each year.

In 1936, paid holidays were introduced in France and the figure rose to a million. Today, 12 million French citizens go to the seaside on vacation every year and government statistics show the number could double by the year 2000.

"Added to this, there is the boom development of such industries as steel and petrochemicals on the coast," he said. "Dunkirk, Le Havre and Fos take up great stretches of coast."

To avoid local squabbles, the association has divided the 2,200 miles of coastline into five sectors which put forward likely plots for purchase.

Then a council of 30 wise men decide which projects will be given the go-ahead. This year they have agreed to 20 and Legrin said: "We hope to have made our first purchases by the end of the year."

He explained that after buying each slice of land, the association would have it cleaned up, forbid any construction whatsoever, maintain it in as natural a state as possible and have local authorities administer it.

Their first big task is to make a huge inventory of the French coastline, mapping every creek and inlet, to see where they can intervene most effectively.

Nanny Admits Lang Got Her a Free Ride

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Scottish nanny of Transport Minister Otto Lang's family was listed as a passenger on a free government flight to Britain tonight, a spokesman for the Canadian Forces Base in Trenton, Ont., said today.

And a published report today quoted the nanny, Elizabeth MacGillivray, as saying she was leaving Ottawa's Uplands Airport tonight on a defence department aircraft. She was also quoted as saying she was flown to Ottawa a year ago under the same arrangement.

However, a spokesman for Lang said today that the minister asked about the arrangement and was told Miss MacGillivray was not eligible for the free ride.

She now will be returning home by a commercial flight, the spokesman said. The national defence department had said she was not qualified to ride free on one of its planes, he added.

Lang's spokesman was unable to confirm if Miss MacGillivray had arrived in Canada on a government flight.

He said her replacement will be flying on a commercial flight from Britain, although he was unsure if space had been requested earlier for her on a government plane.

The report in the Toronto Sun said the replacement nanny is scheduled to fly to Ottawa on a government plane in a few days.

Miss MacGillivray, 21, said she is returning to her home in Morayshire, Scotland, after caring for the seven Lang children.

Lang has come under fire from opposition MPs in the House in recent days because of what they term his extravagant air travel expenses chalked up on transport department aircraft.

Jack Horner, Progressive Conservative transport critic, says Prime Minister Trudeau should remove Lang from the cabinet because the minister is using his position of public trust to better himself privately.

TRAIL RUNS COLD ON $2.4M

AECL Unworried By $20M Fee

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. was aware that it would be liable for a $20 million, unaccountable commission fee if a CANDU reactor was sold to North Korea, AECL's president said Wednesday.

John Foster said AECL's board of directors, and the then minister of energy, mines and resources were told in January, 1975, that the fee would be paid to a foreign agent.

At that time, neither the AECL board nor the federal government expressed any concern about the terms of the contract with a subsidiary of United Development Inc. of Tel Aviv, or the size of the commission, Foster added in an interview following an appearance before the Commons resources committee.

It wasn't until the first bill for $17.5 million arrived on the AECL president's desk in early 1976 that the federal nuclear agency had some second thoughts. These second thoughts subsequently resulted in a renegotiation of the agent's contract so that the fee would be lower initially and so that at least part of the fee would have to be backed up by an accounting from the agent, Foster indicated.

Yet even the renegotiated contract with the South Korean agent that called for a detailed accounting of part of the fee paid by AECL to the agent — where no such accounting was required in the original December, 1974 contract, and that will still cost AECL more than $20 million was not acceptable to the auditor-general.

Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. also paid $2.4 million into a Lichenstein bank account as its share of fees to foreign agents on sale of a nuclear reactor to Argentina.

Energy Minister Gillespie said the money was put into an account held by Intercontinental General Trading Establishment.

But the minister said he still could not say whether this was the agent involved in the Argentinian sale.

"All we know is that that's the payee," the minister said.

An Italian partner on the deal, Italimpianti, made the commercial arrangements for the sale and then billed AECL for its share of $2.4 million.

The minister said his staff have been trying to trace the payments but say the trail at the moment stops in a Schaan, Lichenstein, bank. They weren't sure it could be traced beyond that.

The auditor-general's report specifically questioned the $8.1 million in "expenses" listed by the agent as part of its $15.4 million bill submitted to AECL on April 7, 1976; it concluded that was inadequate documentation of the "expenses" claimed and paid for.

Foster told the Commons committee that when he had received the first bill in early 1976, for $17.5 million, he had become concerned about both its size and the fact that it didn't involve any accountability.

The matter was raised with the AECL board and the new AECL chairman, Ross Campbell, and subsequently re-

Caron Quits Commission

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today that H. Marcel Caron of Montreal has resigned from the newly-named royal commission into government financial supervision.

The prime minister in the Commons had been praising Mr. Caron "for his high integrity" when he stopped and said he had just been handed a letter saying the Montreal accountant is no longer willing to continue as a member of the four-member commission.

Robert Andras, treasury board president, said earlier this week he was making an investigation following criticism of the Caron appointment.

Andras said in the Commons Wednesday he only became aware late Tuesday that one of the commissioners, H. Marcel Caron, was a director of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., (AECL) a Crown corporation which came under fire from the auditor-general.

The minister said it was "a goof" that he did not know the contents of a biography he distributed to reporters on the background of commissioners Monday.

Meanwhile, it was learned here that the cabinet had little to do with either establishment or staffing of the royal commission. High-level sources say the commission and those appointed to it were the brainchild of senior public servants led by Michael Pitfield, secretary to the cabinet.

The $1,000-a-day royal commission was set up by the government after Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell charged that it has lost control of public spending.

The commission is led by Allen Lambert, chairman of the Toronto-Dominion Bank and the man who recommended $60,000-a-year salaries for top bureaucrats while he was head of a private advisory group on the public service.

Another commissioner is O. G. Stoner, deputy trade minister and former Privy Council clerk. Derek Blackburn (NDP-Brant) suggested in the Commons that he may be one of the top public servants fighting the auditor-general's proposal for a senior financial officer overseeing the government's financial operations.

Another member is Prof. John Hodgetts of the University of Toronto, who wrote a book praising the public service as a counter-weight to the excesses of of politicians.

Snow Follows Quake

Times News Services

Relief workers battled a snowstorm today to bring supplies into mountainous eastern Turkey where officials say about 3,000 persons were killed and 1,000 others injured in an earthquake that destroyed 109 villages.

"There is no electricity. It's snowing and the temperature is —12 degrees Fahrenheit," said Burhan Yavuz Yilmaz, deputy governor of stricken Van Province. "We are rushing tents and breads."

The government mobilized soldiers and sent tents, blankets, food and medical supplies by plane and special train to the rugged area hit by the tremor, the strongest to hit this quake-prone area in 37 years.

Yilmaz estimated that Wednesday afternoon's quake killed 3,000 persons, about 1,000 of them in Muradiye where it was centred. That would be two-thirds of the town's 1,600 population. Officials said the quake toppled 95 per cent of the buildings in the agricultural community about 900 miles east of Istanbul.

The quake and subsequent tremors also were felt in Soviet Armenia and in northwest Iran. No reports of casualties or damage were received from the Soviet Union. But officials of the Red Lion and Sun, the Iranian equivalent of the Red Cross, said five persons were killed near the Turkish border. Iranian newspapers estimated 21 dead and many more injured.

A strong earth tremor struck an area 212 miles southwest of Belgrade on the bed of the Adriatic Sea early today, officials said.

The Serbian Seismological Institute said the quake's epicentre was off Korcula Island. No damage was reported.

DRIVE-IN BREAK-IN

B.C.'s first drive-in liquor store opened its doors with a bang in Langford today. And police are hunting for two men who apparently embarked on a drinking bender to end all benders.

Police said the two men smashed a stolen car into the front of the store, buckling the doors, and fled with 10 bottles of sherry and port.

Next stop was Cobble Hill where the car was abandoned and another stolen. The pair took time to break into a garage and home and steal some beer before driving away.

A Colwood RCMP spokesman said a general alert has been issued for the second stolen car—a yellow Datsun—which apparently is being driven up-Island.

Police said two men rammed the first stolen car through the front door of the liquor store in Westbrook Plaza, 770 Goldstream, at about 6:40 a.m.

Police estimated about 10 bottles of Harvey's Shooting Sherry and Paarl port were taken.

"They didn't seem to be interested in anything else," a police spokesman said. "There was a bottle of $53 cognac sitting right there but they didn't touch it."

Police said there was a "big foot print" on a window and speculated the men tried to kick their way in then decided to ram the car through the door.

SOVIET TAR STUMBLES ON SECRETS?

HALIFAX (CP) — Significantly tighter security measures are being implemented at HMC Dockyard here as a result of a directive from Vice-Admiral Douglas Boyle, Canada's coastal defence commander. He is reported to be seething because a drunken Russian seaman wandered into the dockyard and strolled around for an hour last month.

Late one night last month, the drunken Russian seaman, perhaps not knowing he was in a highly-classified military establishment, was seen wandering through the dockyard but was not challenged by workers until he fell into the harbor, sources say.

Glaucoma Plea Beats Charge

WASHINGTON (AP) — A judge dismissed criminal charges Wednesday against a teacher who said he grew marijuana and smoked it to avoid going blind.

District of Columbia Superior Court Judge James A. Washington Jr. ruled that Robert C. Randall, 29, of Washington was entitled to the "defence of necessity" because marijuana had eased his glaucoma after other treatments proved ineffective.

Steel Price Hiked

WASHINGTON (WP) — Two of the U.S.'s major steel producers, including the third biggest, announced price increases of six per cent on sheet steel, the type used to make automobiles and home appliances like refrigerators. The White House immediately criticized the increases.

Bourassa Resigns

QUEBEC (CP) — Robert Bourassa resigned as premier of Quebec today, following the defeat of his Liberal party in the Nov. 15 provincial election. Parti Quebecois leader Rene Levesque was to be sworn in as the new premier later in the day.

TOKYO (UPI) — Former premier Kakuei Tanaka will go on trial Jan. 27 on charges he received $1.6 million from Lockheed Aircraft Corp., the Tokyo district court said today.

EGG SHORTAGE AT CHRISTMAS?

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumers may face an egg shortage over the Christmas holiday period unless the federal government slaps controls on exports to the United States, the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA), said today.

Max Roytenberg, CEMA's general manager, said because Canadian eggs now are cheaper than those in the U.S., "the possibility exists that during the Christmas season — the period of heaviest consumption — there will be an incentive to ship the lower-priced Canadian eggs to the United States."

That might cause a domestic shortage, he said at a news conference.

PM Rules Out Unity by Force

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Wednesday his government never will use force to keep the country together.

But he told a national television and radio audience it would be a "sin against humanity" if the country disintegrated in the wake of a separatist government's election in Quebec.

"I believe that Canada cannot, indeed . . . must not survive by force," Trudeau said in an address taped at the government's official guest house across the street from his residence.

Canadians, he said, must face the "brutal question" of the country's survival following the Nov. 15 election of Rene Levesque's Parti Quebecois government, a government convinced that "there is no room in Canada for all Canadians."

"The crisis is real . . . and the challenge is immediate."

But while Trudeau concentrated on what he described as a crisis over Confederation, federal opposition leaders maintained that the real crisis centred on the deterioration of the economy and on the Trudeau government.

None of the party leaders, including Trudeau, made statements substantially different from those they made the night Levesque's separatists overthrew the Liberal government of Robert Bourassa.

The federal caucus of the New Democratic Party though, has begun discussion on ways the party might co-operate with the newly-elected Parti Quebecois on economic and social questions where the two parties agree.

While some federal members took pains to point out the social-democratic similarities of the two parties, NDP Leader Ed Broadbent outlined on national television the most contentious issue between the two parties, saying that "to pretend the PQ separatist commitment does not exist is to delude ourselves."

B.C.'s Salaries Highest

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — B.C. continues to lead the nation in average weekly salaries, although a national survey shows all wage increases have been reduced under the Anti-Inflation Board.

According to the survey conducted across the country by the management consulting firm of Stevenson and Kellogg Ltd., B.C. has average weekly earnings of $263.37.

The Canadian median is $230.19 per week. Alberta had a provincial average of $240.41, Saskatchewan was $217.84 and Manitoba was $210.59.

Saskatchewan had the largest actual salary increase percentage increase this year. Firms subject to AIB controls reported salary boosts averaging 11.2 per cent, and non-AIB firms were 13.8 per cent higher. In 1977 the same categories anticipate increases of 8.2 and 11 per cent respectively, which may suggest that the province is in the midst of a drive to catch up with the rest of Canada.

Although increases in the AIB and non-AIB categories were the same for B.C. and Alberta this year — 9.5 and 11.1 per cent respectively — indications are that B.C. increases in 1977 will be slightly higher at 7.7 and 9.0 against 7.5 and 8.7 in the neighboring province.

Starting salaries for B.C. college graduates were found to be highest in all categories except for graduates of science courses. Graduates in

By DON VIPOND

The Capital Region Board Wednesday renewed its struggle to locate a new hospital at Douglas and McKenzie — after word the owners had chopped $500,000 from the property price.

But the decision, after an hour of debate behind closed doors, once again split the board, with Colwood, Langford, View Royal and Central Saanich continuing to argue in favor of a site nearer them on Helmcken Road north of the Trans-Canada Highway.

The 34-acre Helmcken site cost $525,000 without servicing while the original price for the 25-acre property at Douglas and McKenzie was $2.5 million, later $2.25 million and now $1.75 million.

Planners and a majority of the regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission made it clear earlier this year that the Douglas-McKenzie site was their first choice, well ahead of Helmcken because of location and services.

But they reluctantly accepted the Helmcken site after Health Minister Bob McClelland said the other one was too expensive and the provincial government would not pay its usual share for it.

While the Helmcken site is in View Royal, it is close to the Saanich boundary and Saanich has worried aloud about having to pay up to $1 million in extending services to meet the hospital's needs. Estimates for sewering the Helmcken site range from $344,000 to $642,000.

Regional directors have also argued the Helmcken site does not meet their master plan for strategically placed and co-ordinated hospital development, and that the initial size of 250 beds McClelland put on the new hospital further disrupts planning.

Even with widening they claim the Trans-Canada Highway will generate major traffic problems, for one reason because it separates the rapidly-growing western community from the Helmcken site.

The regional board's resumption of the site battle came with word that R and M Development Ltd., whose principals are Fraser McColl and Gordon Rolston, have of-

Bubble Brigade

Heave ho and up she goes!

Well, not quite perhaps. But a 10-man crew from Victoria Paving Co. was certainly putting everything into final preparations today for the erection of the giant bubble that will house Oak Bay's new indoor four-court tennis centre.

Play will begin on the four covered courts on Dec. 1 and the official opening of the centre, which will cost some half-a-million dollars, is set for Dec. 9.

Rich Morris, the owner of the Thermo-Flex company that is supplying the bubble, is here from Salina, Kansas, to oversee the hoist and was there today watching the men roll out the canvas.

"Several hours will be spent checking around the edges to make sure it's well anchored down to provide a complete air seal," explained Oak Bay Recreation Centre director Bill Johnson.

"We expect to put the bubble up early Friday morning," he added. "It only takes 30 minutes to rise once they start blasting the air in."

And the name of the particular model of bubble that Oak Bay will have between its present centre and the high school?

Cloud Nine, it's called. And, quips Johnson:

Delay, You Pay Oak Bay Told

Oak Bay was warned at Wednesday's meeting of the Capital Region Board that it will be sent the bill if it causes delays which hike the price of a giant sewage project.

The warning came with word that Oak Bay is still examining alternatives to locating a large sewage pumping station at Shoal Bay, a move vehemently opposed by neighbors earlier this year.

Saanich and Victoria are partners with Oak Bay in the project, which will see some of the sewage from all three municipalities diverted to Clover Point where a new 6,000-foot outfall will discharge it into Juan de Fuca Strait. Raw sewage is now discharged there at tideline.

Part of the plan involves diverting sewage now being dumped at McMicking Point outfall in Oak Bay to the much longer Clover Point outfall and this is what requires the pumping station at Shoal Bay or vicinity.

Victoria Mayor Mike Young and Saanich Mayor Ed Lum expressed concern Wednesday, as did board chairman Jim Campbell, when Oak Bay's representative, Ald. Shirley Dowell, said the site question needs more study.

When Dowell suggested Victoria and Saanich had caused earlier delays in settling on a cost-sharing formula, Campbell said true or not that hardly constitutes a defence for more delays once an agreement had been reached.

In other business, a majority of the board voted against rezoning a 28-acre parcel in Langford where Ridley Brothers want to develop a lumber store and yard initially.

The property, on Jacklin opposite Jenkins, is where a town centre is shown on the draft community plan of the area. Most directors were not opposed to the lumber business but felt it did not require rezoning to extended commercial of such a large parcel. Some suggested the developer proceed under a land-use contract.

Shipyard Mediator Trying

Labor mediator Fred Geddes met union spokesmen in Vancouver today in a further effort to avert a strike in B.C.'s two major shipyards.

Employees at Burrard Dry Dock Ltd. and Yarrows Ltd. and at two subsidiary operations of Quadra Steel Ltd. have voted in favor of a strike action to back contract demands.

Earlier, James McAvoy, of the Joint Shipyards Conference of unions, said Geddes would be asked to withdraw as mediator.

Campbell Warms To Bawlf Report

Capital Regional District chairman Jim Campbell today said he would like to see the provincial government implement the Bawlf housing report without the proposed threat to withhold grants to unco-operative municipalities.

"The program could work very well but it must be based on help and co-operation, not threats," he said.

Campbell said he had at first been negative toward the report, which was released this month, but now views it favorably based upon a full reading.

"I was concerned about the childish talk about withholding our grants. I believe the government should implement the report soon but without the threats."

The report, written by Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf, says the provincial government should ask a regional district to provide a quota of various housing types.

A storm arose over a Bawlf recommendation that any municipality that refuses to meet its quota should lose all provincial government grants.

"That kind of talk is childish," Campbell said.

"We should be co-operating. If the provincial government wants us to do these things, they should encourage us by providing financial assistance. That is the way it should be done," Campbell said.

He said the Capital Regional District would be pleased to receive housing quotas from the provincial government and would distribute these quotas among local municipalities.

"We would give a municipality a quota based upon the idea that it would be reasonable for them to provide that kind of housing.

"If they don't carry out the quota, we (the Capital Regional District board) would be very interested in finding out why. Maybe they have a good reason. Maybe they can't afford it. Then we could decide what we would do about it."

The key to the success of the Bawlf report would be provincial government grants large enough to remove the burden of costs from the municipalities.

"Housing doesn't pay its way in municipal taxes. If the provincial government saddles a municipality with the responsibility to provide housing, it should also supply the funds to help the municipality meet this responsibility."

He said the province and municipality form a client-agent relationship. The province, as client, asks the agent to carry out various tasks but sometimes neglects to pay the agent.

"Every time it (the provincial government) gives a municipality a new task, it should supply the funds to pay for it or it should give the municipality the power to raise the money required. The main problem has been that the government continues to give municipalities new responsibilities without providing the funds."

He said the Bawlf report could help solve the housing problem if it was implemented in a spirit of co-operation.

"There will be no enthusiasm, however, if the government uses threats."

Campbell said he has not altered his opposition to the threats in the Bawlf report but is optimistic the legislation would omit this feature.

Reserve Asked For Islets Off Oak Bay

Ecological reserves are part of a world system of reserves dedicated to saving examples of the environment for scientific research and education.

The three main islets involved are Jemmy Jones off Cadboro Bay, Great Chain Island, midway between Oak Bay Marina and Discovery Island, and Alpha Island on the east side of Chatham Island.

The proposal, which includes the sea floor to a depth of five fathoms, was submitted by ERC director Bristol Foster, chairman of the meeting, and Jim Pojar, a biologist with the committee.

Pojar told the resource experts that Great Chain Island and the adjacent islets support the largest sea bird population in the Gulf of Georgia.

Gulls, cormorants, oystercatchers and igeon guillemots nest there, and the floor of the sea, he said, is rich in sea life, such as shell-bearing marine invertebrates and marine plants.

Alpha Island off Chatham, he added, has interesting flora as no sheep graze there.

Pojar also submitted proposals to preserve two river estuaries on the west coast of Vancouver Island because of their importance as feeding grounds for fish, shell fish, sea and shore birds and elk herds.

"It is one of the most interesting estuaries on the Island," he said. "It includes a tidal marsh and a flood plain — the feeding ground of a herd of elk during the winter months.

Pacific oysters, now an endangered species, are also found there.

(Oysters found on the east coast of the island are mostly of Japanese origin.)

The species is pretty scarce," he said. "We should do something to protect them before they are exterminated."

Pojar said the ecological reserve would be about 500 acres, involving mostly marsh and flood lands.

"This is the winter feeding grounds of one of the largest elk herds on the island," Pojar said. "Like Klaskish, it is an undisturbed estuary and its watershed largely unlogged."

He also noted both estuaries are important resting places of thousands of migratory birds.

More than 25 other sites for ecological status have yet to be submitted to the committee.

One of these is the Chemainus River estuary which local levels of government and ratepayer groups want protected from industrial or residential developments.

The request for ecological status for the Chemainus River estuary is based on a report published last January by the federal department of environment.

All proposals submitted to the committee are referred to cabinet for approval.

Ask the Times

Q. Over the years I have been trying to find either a breakfast or dinner set with a colored maple leaf pattern but have been unable to find one. Where can one buy either a dinner or breakfast set with colored maple leaf pattern. H.H.

A. A check with Victoria's china stores failed to come up with a solution to your problem. The only set available is at Henry Birks and Sons Ltd., 706 Yates. They have a Bavarian coffee set — coffee pot, cream and sugar, six cups and saucers, and six plates. It sells at $50 but the maple leaves are not brightly colored. The only other maple leaf design is Royal Albert's silver maple ware. This can be ordered as open stock from Elsea's Gift Store, 637 Fort.

HITSCHMANOVA
. . . meeting Monday

USC Campaigner In Town Friday

She wears almost a military type uniform and in her case, it's fitting.

The neat, khaki outfit with its collar and tie and peaked cap is appropriate for a woman who has soldiered her way around the world fighting to help the underprivileged and poor.

Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, founder and mainspring of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada, donned the uniform more than 30 years ago in what was then a crusade on behalf of children who survived wartime concentration camps.

Her battle has been waged ever since across Europe, into Korea, Hong Kong, Vietnam, Africa, Bangladesh, Indonesia and Nepal.

Through annual fund-raising and special gifts the USC today supports 14 programs in 12 nations, mostly inspected personally by this diminutive "soldier" once a year.

Dr. Lotta — as she has become known — arrives in Victoria Friday in advance of her pre-Christmas campaign, as she has done for more than 20 years.

She will make personal contracts and address a public meeting Monday at 8 p.m. at the Efpress Hotel on the subject, Tomorrow Could be kind, supported with a slide presentation.

Among those who have praised her work, is Prime Minister Trudeau.

"In the 31 years since Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova organized the USC, a great deal has been accomplished to alleviate suffering and improve the quality of life around the world," he said.

"Under Dr. Hitschamnova's guidance, the USC continues to succeed in and to expand its invaluable programs . . . I am pleased to offer you my wholehearted support."

Logging Show At Sooke For Top Cops

It will be a case of cops and loggers.

The Capital Region Board voted a grant of $4,000 Wednesday to sponsor a "mini-Sooke Day" next August when the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police holds its annual conference in Victoria.

City police chief Jack Gregory is the association's immediate past president. There will be 400 to 450 police chiefs on hand Aug. 22 to 27.

The "mini-Sooke Day" will consist of a display of logging sports and activities as well as a salmon barbecue.

Aerial Truck Arriving On Friday

Saanich's new aerial truck with its 100-foot ladder will be delivered Friday.

Chief Harold Gains said today the equipment, which cost $140,000, will enable Saanich firefighters to deal with fires in eight-storey buildings.

The highest buildings in the municipality now are five-storeys.

An electronic monitor at the end of the ladder can release water at the rate of 1,500 gallons a minute, Gains said, and will be invaluable in reaching areas too hazardous for firefighters.

The aerial, mounted on an International Harvester truck, was built by the Montreal company of Pierre Thibault.

Driven from Montreal, it arrived in Vancouver on Friday.

Gains said International Harvester's service depot there has been doing warranty work on the truck since then and "ironing out any bugs that showed up during the 4,000 miles (between Montreal and Vancouver)."

This will be the second such piece of equipment in the Greater Victoria area, the first being purchased by the city of Victoria.

After the Snooze, a Five-Year Nightmare

Earl Sutherland, who had an hour's shooze in a bank before robbing it, was sentenced Wednesday in provincial court to five years in prison.

A last-minute application to change his guilty plea to not guilty was rejected by Judge Blake Allan.

The 52-year-old Sutherland was observed sleeping in the lounge area of the Bank of Commerce on Government on Oct. 20.

After about an hour, he got up, walked to a teller handed her a shopping bag and asked for money. He got more than $1,900.

Sutherland then went on a spending spree in Port Angeles and was arrested several days after his return. He had spent most of the money.

Sutherland originally pleaded guilty but when he was to be sentenced Tuesday, lawyer Gordon Macdonald told court he had been retained by the accused with instruction to apply for a change of plea.

He told court Sutherland was an alcoholic and was under the influence of alcohol when he pleaded guilty. Sutherland didn't really appreciate the seriousness of the charge, Macdonald said.

He said that, according to the pre-sentence report, Sutherland was drinking three quarts of hard liquor a day.

That certainly was a phenomenal quantity, the judge agreed with Macdonald, adding he would have to take that allegation with a grain of salt.

"Most people couldn't drink three quarts of milk a day," he said.

In refusing to allow the change of plea, Judge Allan said he was satisfied he had done everything to inform the accused of the severity of the charge at the time he pleaded guilty.

He said he had to consider the cost to the public of a trial and under the circumstances, that cost would be unjustified.

Macdonald asked the judge to consider a two-year sentence with alcohol counselling, but Allan said the charge was too serious for such a light sentence.

He also stressed that Sutherland had a lengthy record — 64 previous convictions for a variety of offences.

Mark One Up for the Bicycling Fraternity

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

There is no legal duty for a cyclist to give his name and address to a policeman, a Victoria county court judge ruled in Victoria Wednesday.

As a result, said Judge Peter Millward, there can be no obstruction of a police officer when a cyclist refuses this information.

He directed a jury to return a verdict of not guilty for Richard Harvey Moore, 48, accused of obstructing a policeman April 19.

The crown contended that Moore refused to pull over and give his name and address to a policeman after cycling through a red light, and then tried to flee. This, it was argued, constituted obstruction.

Millward, however, ruled in favor of a no-evidence motion presented by defence counsel Doug Christie and called the jury in to hear his reasons.

He said that Section 118 of the Criminal Code, regarding public assistance to a policeman, didn't apply because there was no evidence Moore was given notice to assist the policeman in keeping the peace.

There was notice that Moore had violated the Motor Vehicle Act by going through a red light, but Christie argued a bicycle is not a motor vehicle within the terms of the Motor Vehicle Act.

A "motor vehicle" was defined as a "vehicle" which was defined as "a device in, upon, or by which a person or thing is or may be transported or drawn upon a highway, except a device designed to be moved by human power or used exclusively upon stationary rails or tracks."

Another section states that it is an offence for a person "driving or operating or in charge of a motor vehicle" to refuse to stop when requested by police or give a name and address.

While it "seems incredible," Millward said, Moore, while he was a person operating a bicycle, was not a person driving a vehicle under the Motor Vehicle Act.

He said citizens should cooperate with police and provide their name and address when requested, but there was no duty for cyclists to do this "and where there is no duty there's no obstruction."

Crown counsel Roger Cardinal had argued that Section 173 of the Motor Vehicle Act applied. This says that "in addition to the duties imposed by this section, a person operating a cycle upon a highway has the same rights and duties as a driver of a vehicle."

An appeal by the crown is under consideration, it was learned later.
